| 2023-04-21 17:39:18 | Gauteng        |         | No I do not | Other      | The Eskom Debt Relief Bill is not to be supported in any way whatsoever. This is just another attempt by the corrupt and inefficient ANC government to find a quick and dirty solution to their own failures, once again to the detriment of law abiding citizens. The dilemma Eskom finds itself in today is a direct result of the ANC government's own mismanagement and corruption. And this includes the president of the country. The ANC knows they are solely to be blamed for each and every State entity which is being run into the ground, yet they have the audacity to pass on their ineptness to the public, and the relatively small proportion of taxpayers who have always been committed to honesty and integrity, qualities and values of which the ANC government possess none of.If accountability needs to be found for the financial disaster the ANC (through mismanaged state entities) is in today, it must be directed to the leadership structures of both Eskom and the ANC government, as well as the president of the country, for turning a blind eye towards inefficiency and criminality. Hold those people accountable: Suspend them, fire them, for inefficiencies which have been allowed for many years without any consequence. Even the president himself should be held to account, but certainly not law abiding citizens.I am sick and tired of the ANC government who always wants to find ways to get away from their responsibilities, and the failures they themselves cause. The ANC government today is this country's major liability, which we as a country cannot and should not tolerate any longer.If all these debt is allowed to be written off, it would further create a dangerous president, to such an extent that this corrupt government will always keep on finding ways to write off any similar debt. This makes a joke of the Auditor General's role, who always makes these types of financial mismanagement visible, yet the question is for what? No government department appears to care its accountability, and this includes the president. Unless the issues of financial mismanagement are not resolved on the very highest level, our country will be sucked dry by the ANC government and its inefficiencies.I myself (and many law abiding citizens), have always done our best to be responsible, also towards our financial responsibilities towards government, and I have never been allowed any credit or grants in the event of penalties I incurred for having acted wrongly. The same is unfortunately to be demanded from this incompetent government, and certainly not (again) from honest taxpayers. | Hennie     | retired |

Instead we have corruption and crime syndicates running Eskom whose only goal is to seize any opportunity to enrich themselves whilst crippling Eskom, the economy and the country.This is TREASON AT THE HIGHEST LEVEL. The state owned enterprises, Eskom included, are just shockingly managed. The issues relating to South Africas power requirements have been known about since Eskom executives raised the flag regarding SA needing to build more capacity back in 1998. That is 25 years ago. If you have been unable to deal with a problem for 25 years and you have not only been unable to solve the problem at hand, but have made the position many times worse, maybe its time to change the approach. This approach of creating a crisis and then forcing a bail out as its the most expedient way out of the problem at the time is just impoverishing us all. If the government was serious about solving the power crisis, they wouldn't be putting up yet more of the same actions that got us here in the first place. The way out of this crisis is not more of the same. The way out is a different approach, it's letting other players into the space, it's about actually prosecuting politically connected people and organizations that defraud and steal from Eskom, it's about letting Eskom become independent with one focused mission and that is to produce abundant cheap electricity, and so the list goes on. As a tax payer I do not want to give Eskom another cent. | Paulette   | retired |

Also all politicians and known politically orientated Eskom workers on all levels have to be replaced by both business and technically orientated and qualified staff members. Then there is hope. Continuing the enormous, generous funding Eskom has received for very many years is a totally illogical move. Eskom in its present form is not able to deliver. In fact they have defied every accepted Business Plan principle! They are a joke and if they believe that foreign investors will be fooled by shifting some of Eskom debt Treasury to make their financials appear more attractive, they are even more stupid than I originally thought. They don't remotely deserve a bailout at the taxpayers expense. In fact as an SOE they make SAA look like Mickey Mouse in comparison. In my opinion they really should be given only 2 options:OPTION 1: If you want to remain an SOE then do radical restructuring to get rid of all your incompetent and unproductive staff. That should equate to probably 80% of your management with the balance making up a total of 50% of your current staff complement. Source proven skilled employees locally or internationally and reduce your over inflated salaries while not entertaining any ridiculous Union demands for added benefits such as 80% medical subsidisation, additional housing and education benefits for children etc. Also, please remember that no employee is entitled to a Performance Bonus if an SOE is reliant on a Taxpayer bailout due to overall performance outcomes i.e. financially negative.OPTION 2: Privatise! The best option in my opinion. It's worked internationally and while it will take a few years to rectify the failures of the past few decades, it is the long term solution to secure a reliable electric infrastructure that will attract foreign investment. | John     | retired |

In the end, with taxpayer citizen's money bailing them out by the billions, they still infringe higher tariffs on those same taxpayers for the electricity the taxpayers are consuming daily, meaning we pay them double for just being able to have electricity, despite the fact that we don't have normal access to electricity because of load shedding. It is completely unfair to the taxpayers and citizens of the country. Eskom must be held accountable for their waste of money and resources! | 2023-04-1713:53:27 | Gauteng           | No I do not | Other | The plan and Bill will simply shift the debt and interest burden from Eskom to the taxpayers. The Eskom disaster was caused by the ANC Administration cadre deployment, incompetence, maladministration, corruption, over inflated invoicing due to B-BBEE requirements, failure to prosecute the Eskom mafias and saboteurs and the new plan will not stop the cost of the disaster currently included in electricity tariffs to be included in the interest to be paid by the National Treasury on the funds to be borrowed from the market. In short, the proper solution is to cut the cost structure of Eskom by inter alia substantially reducing the staff complement in line with the electricity being produced by Eskom and to privatize Eskom totally. The ANC Administration has become an employment agency, effectively buying votes at the expense of electricity users and taxpayers because the taxpayers are already funding all the historical Eskom bailouts. On 24 July 2018, only 12 days later, Eskom also signed a R33 billion loan with China. Surely Eskom had more than enough money to address the problems they encountered instead of asking for bailouts. The question remains where is all that money? Strangely enough Patrice Motsepe who went to Saudi Arabia with Ramaphosa and Jeff Radebe to Saudi Arabia in July 2018, donated on 1 December 2018, R3.5 billion for the land reform that was land expropriation without compensation. The money invested by and loaned from foreign governments, it seems, was never really meant for Eskom but meant to enrich elite individuals as there are no evidence of all that money spent for what it was intended for in the first place. Another point to raise, I am sure, is that there is no shortage of coal at Eskom. | 2023-04-1417:22:53 | Western Cape  | No I do not | Other | How can one fix a business that is so broke - in both senses of the word.In th early 1990's Eskom was admired internationally. So why is it now broke?The greed of Chancellor House (ANC) in conflict with the interests of the country.This in turn led to under-servicing of the existing plants on the one hand, and lack of planning for new plants (or alternative energies) on the other.Cadre employment - resulted in jobs for pals and lackeys rather than jobs for competents. Potential CEO's with international experience were ignored, presumably as they refused to toe the party line. Other competents were also ignored in favour of underqualified managers and staff at all levels.Incompetent engineers - couldn't even keep the plants running efficiently, nevermind design, or oversee the construction, of new plants. Hence, for example, Medupi and Kasile - which cost a multiple of their original quotes, took at least twice as long to erect as should have been the case, and are still hardly able to function due to "design problems" and poor construction.Corruption - consider the Zondo Commission's report in this regard, and then multiply the apparent findings by some (unknown) multiple. At the design and construction end, the numbers are huge and the interest to actually deliver a working plant is marred by the inherent corruption involved. Add in all the other day to day corruptions - like underspec coal that does not fire properly, but harms the plants as a side-product; coal that never reaches its intended destination but is paid for nevetheless; coal that is overpaid for due to water added into the coal lorry when it is weighed. Add in overcostings on other items needed to run the plants (and the electricity grid) and the overall financial bleeding is mindblowing.How many people have been charged? How much money has been recovered? What is being done to stop the rot? Across the board? Clearly not much.So how in heaven's name can anyone think that this is a financing problem, that will be solved by granting Eskom a substantial freebee, paid for by tax-payers money over the next 3 years? Either the government needs to fix Eskom, quickly, which I would think is impossible with the ANC running the country (into the ground). Whereafter Eskom could possibly be able to slowly obtain further external financing.Or Eskom should be put into business rescue and let the consequences follow. The acquirers of the assets should presumably be able to turn their new assets into profitable and sustainable businesses, although they would no doubt require assurances that indiscretions (corruption etc) will be severely dealt with.The public purse may well still lose a substantial amount of money from the latter process, but at least there could be some hope for the future. Eskom, in its present form presents no hope at all, unless it can miraculously shed itself of all the negative factors to which it is still exposed. | Peter            | retired |

Businessmen/women do not have the professional knowledge that is needed to efficiently maintain highly complicated workings of a power station and therefore do not understand about the need for and importance of regular maintenance of the power stations. Wasteful and irregular spending combined with lack of maintenance skills is a major cause of constant breakdowns of the power supply to customers. Allocated money is not used efficiently. There is much corruption within the power utility and theft of cables, especially during load shedding, is rife because substations are not properly secured. Being funded would mean more to steal and waste. People who do not pay for power steal power through illicit connections to power lines. This is a major concern as people die because of these illegal connections. Some are using illegal connection to make money by charging people in informal settlements who pay them and not Eskom or the City of Joburg (City Power). Eskom power is being used by criminals to enrich themselves at the expense of honest citizens and is a huge loss to Eskom financially.- If electricity was made available legally and at a reduced cost to ALL citizens there would be no need for the utility to be propped up by taxpayers who are already heavily taxed. | Irene    | retired |

Unless the corruption in Eskom is properly addressed, criminals prosecuted (for once) and Eskom's house is put in order, this will simply be throwing good money after bad. The rest of South Africans have to service their debts – no matter how poor they are, or else face criminal prosecution. Eskom needs to step up and take care of their own debt. The current funds from electricity tariffs as well as collecting debts owed by municipalities that are in arrears should cover Eskom's debt over time. This coupled with the payments outstanding from municipalities and other government institutions should be enough. In short, if the government (all 3 tiers) paid their debt no help from treasury is necessary. If municipalities struggle to collect outstanding monies from consumers, government should provide debt collectors (supported by police where necessary). All illegal tapping of electricity should be removed by inspectors to lessen the pressure on Eskom. Excess power should be bought from all households and businesses with solar power immediately to add to the grid. An audit must be done on the excessive money paid by Eskom for various reasons. They expect the ordinary man in the street to contribute towards this problem and to pay extra on the electricity we sometimes receive, The people who have paid their electricity bills every month are now being penalized by having to pay more to make up the missing money. This resulted in poor maintenance and non-delivery of the main product of Eskom, viz. electricity for everyone ! The failure was compensated by the "load shedding concept", an ANC invention never heard before anywhere in the world.Now, instead of improving their capacity to DELIVER electricity, they not only have their debts & mistakes obscured, but on top of it, they would be given free millions at the expense of the already hard-hit TAXPAYER without being held responsible for the mess created by incompetent, unqualified and corrupt mangers, protected by equally corrupt politicians ? The ONLY solution is to get rid of ALL these incompetent characters and bring Eskom back to what it was before the ANC took over, viz. a competent & productive Enterprise !!! The parties using the service must pay for what they use. Municipalities which default on their debt to Eskom need to be appropriately addressed. The overstaffing of Eskom must be urgently dealt with through staff reduction to appropriately skilled staff requirements. The unsustainable practises of the past few decades must be identified and eliminated. Persons who have engaged in criminal and corrupt practices to the detriment of Eskom and electricity supply to the country must be dealt with to the full extent of the law, including criminal prosecution and restitution through asset forfeiture and/or civil procedure. I am aware of an instance where a person living a luxurious lifestyle and running a multi-million annual turnover business from his property was exposed for having made an illegal and undetectable connection to the municipal cable and stealing electricity for over a decade. Instead of being prosecuted on the original charge of interfering with essential infrastructure (with a potential sentence of 30 years imprisonment or R 100 million fine) a plea bargain for merely stealing electricity was accepted by the NPA with a R 3 000.00 fine. The value of the stolen electricity would have run into hundreds of thousands of rands, if not millions. Considering the dire situation regarding electricity supply in the country one can only speculate as to why the NPA's response to this crime was so lenient and inadequate. Clearly, it could not be construed as a deterrent and the criminal was permitted to walk away with a mere slap on the wrist whilst having made a massive profit from his criminality. Conceivably, how the NPA conducts itself regarding such prosecutions needs to be closely monitored for justice to be seen to be done and to achieve any constructive purpose. | Hardaker         | retired |

Why must we line the pockets of the Mafia. De Ruyter pointed out that there are 2 too officials involved in the looting. We think that "the big guy" has had enough. We, the citizens of South Africa kept bailing out SAA, and look where that got us. It's time for the feeding trough to come to an end. No more bailouts for ESKOM. We are tired of this now. SOE's have proven that they do not work because their hands are in the cookie jars. Rather, privatisation would be the route to go. But anc must be kept far from having anything to do with this. ESKOM used to be a top notch entity, before ANC. | Judith    | retired |

| 2023-04-1722:19:09 | Gauteng           |  | No I do not | Direct chargesforrequirementsof Eskom | The proposed Eskom Debt Relief Bill raises a number of concerns. "Direct charges for requirements of Eskom": Subsection (2)(2)(c) requires that when Eskom has met the conditions for the conversion of any portion of the amount of the loan for a financial year, Eskom must issue ordinary shares to the State equal to the value of the portion of the amount. The State is already the majority shareholder of Eskom and this will further increase the ANC's "choke-hold" on Eskom. Subsection (3) makes provision in the 2025/2026 financial year for an additional amount of R70 billion of the Eskom debt to be taken over by the National Revenue Fund. The debt relief arrangements proposed in this Bill are dependent on the Government implementing key reforms and adhering to the obligatory conditions. The ANC's dismal failure to implement any key reforms in the past, despite grave warnings given over many years regarding the decline of Eskom's capability to run the power grid efficiently and Government's continued interference in the running of Eskom is a clear indication of a lack of political will to relinquish their control of Eskom.Another grave concern is "Delegations and Authorisations" Subsection 3(1) The Minister may (a) delegate to an employee of the National Treasury any power conferred on the Minister in terms of the Act and (b) authorise an employee of the National Treasury to perform any duty imposed on the Minister in terms of this Act and 3(2)(c) may authorise the employee contemplated in subsection (1) to sub-delegate .....". These delegated employees will therefore be answerable only to the Minister and not to the National Treasury. This can again lead to malfeasance.The Eskom Debt Relief Bill is another clear example of the ANC Government not being prepared to face the consequences of its own bad governance and inherent corruption. Instead, it continues to place heavier financial burdens on the people of South Africa, many of whom are already struggling just to survive. | Theresa | retired |

Had the president, ministers & Eskom set about seriously addressing corruption and allowing private energy generation on a large scale, I may have had some sympathy for this proposal; however this is not the case. The National Revenue Fund belongs to the peoples & businesses of this country who directly and indirectly fund the fiscus. The right people should be sent in to sort out Eskom instead of relying in a pool of talentless cadres & get them to effect a proper turn-around strategy. This is a state owned entity meaning that footing the bill is ostensibly laid at the feet of all energy-using South African citizens. In reality, only those with jobs (i.e. taxpayers) will manage massive increases while loadshedding shuts down small businesses putting more taxpayers out of work. It's a vicious cycle that this government is hopelessly incompetent at addressing. Eskom debt relief is not going to do it.   | Clyde    | retired |

Any further bail out money will go the same way as all previous funding. The ANC should get their act together and ensure corruption, fraud and theft is eliminated effectively within and within ESKOM as a SOE. | 2023-04-1400:07:08 | Gauteng       | No I do not | Direct charges for requirements of Eskom | My top reasons for not supporting the Eskom Debt Relief Bill as proposed, also include delegations and authorisations, amongst other concerns held. The proposal includes interventions on more than just Eskom's debt i.e.; it also makes mention of a need for Eskom to implement the stipulated tariff; a plan to address the municipal debt challenges; and limiting Eskom's ability to implement remuneration increases, which negatively affects its overall financial position and sustainability. These proposals do not represent without challenges and in order to succeed, will require urgent, bold and integrated intervention, along with political will to execute. The primary concern remaining, that why has it taken government so long to effectively address these challenges, and do they have the necessary expertise and will to execute, or is this proposal just further lip service on paper, resulting once again in the tax payer, needing to foot the bill? Furthermore, clarity is needed on whether or not, the outcome of the international consortium's review of Eskom's coal-fleet plant, will be made available to the public. Clear understanding is also needed on recommendations made, and how these would be funded, timelines for implementation, and importantly, whether Eskom's aged coal fleet, can in fact be restored to original manufacturers equipment standards. The plan for Eskom to address its long outstanding, and fast increasing municipal debt challenge, also requires further urgent investigation, and clear mandate. Namely, will this result in municipalities paying for services received? This in itself poses execution risk, and thereby placing the overall relief plan at risk. The proposed Eskom's loan portfolio that government will directly take over, also requires clear understanding being provided to the public. Since 2008, government has provided billions of Rands in taxpayers money to Eskom, in the form of bailouts. Each allocation, has dismally failed to prevent Eskom's financial challenges and the collapse of operations. And why, a different approach is needed. However, does government have the will and expertise to ensure that this time round, the proposed debt relief plan can be successfully executed, and in view of all past failures, one can only seriously question the ability to make this any different, this time round. Of most importance, what guarantee is or will even be provided to SA Citizens, that this bailout in the form of a taxpayer-funded loan, would not only result in further increased tariffs being proposed and implemented by Eskom, in order to enable Eskom to repay the loan to National Treasury? Further increased tariffs, when in fact the average SA Citizen can no longer even afford the existing increased tariffs! But then, does anyone in government or in Eskom, even take this into urgent consideration. Sadly not! The average SA citizen no longer has any confidence left in the current governments ability, or Eskom, to bring about needed change. Every move and proposal put forward is now viewed with much suspicion, and clearly, by their own track record they are to blame. | Marlene  | retired |

While Eskom are supported by the government to remain unaccountable for past losses and expenditure, we the citizens and taxpayers cannot support loans to cover this unsolved financial problem. When the government enforce a plan for accountability and transparency with good governance within the ranks of Eskom, as a solution going forward, we can become part of that solution. We as citizens cannot support or pay the cost for further corrupt practice.  | Karen     | retired |

| 2023-04-1312:41:50 | KwaZulu-Natal |  | No I do not | Direct charges for requirements of Eskom | The funding of Eskom has been a bottomless pit because it is corruption and sabotage on a grand scale which gobbles up the funds the government has poured into it. Deal first with the corruption, which seems to start with government ministers. Trace the stolen funds and get the money back and then decide how much is still needed to pay the debts of this failed SOE, and then sell it to be run by private enterprise tasked to salvage what can be restored and close the rest. The funds at present in question should be used to build up this new structure. It is abundantly clear that the ANC's version of a communist structure for the provision of SOE shrives has failed and is inappropriate for Africa. It must be abandoned to make day for other concepts more workable.  | Jon       | retired |

Expecting the +- 7 million taxpayers to help cover Eskom's financial shortfalls by imposing some sort of Electricity surcharge/levy whilst government itself appears to be doing very little to reduce Eskom's debt is nothing short of legalized extortion. The already overtaxed population are thoroughly disenchanted with this ongoing government/Eskom self-made disaster, mainly because of its reluctance to force indebted municipalities to pay their electricity debt, eliminate electricity theft, corruption, sabotage, mismanagement, infrastructure theft, delivery of inferior coal. etc. etc. as well as its inability to reduce the Eskom excessive wage bill . | Ian       | retired |

| 2023-04-1306:02:29 | Western Cape  |  | No I do not | Direct charges for requirements of Eskom | While Eskom certainly needs rescuing, asking the tax-payers to fund yet another governance failure (given that less than 50% of South Africans apparently are paying tax) is shocking. Why is this not coming from those who caused Eskom's financial debt? The failure of municipalities to pay for municipal consumption is a large part of the debt tax-payers would be financing. What did those municipalities do with the electricity payments made by their residents? How much money did the municipalities squander - or steal? The first debt relief write-off should come from the municipalities that failed to collect and pass on to Eskom the usage charges incurred. Why should tax-payers be paying for electricity usage in incompetent - or corrupt - municipalities? And then, what of the large debts Government departments across the country incurred by not paying off electricity usage from Eskom/municipalities? From what I recall, the Government owes Eskom a large portion of Eskom's debt. How should the Government repay their portion of the debt owing to Eskom? Are tax-payers who did not vote the ANC into power expected to help carry the Government's debt? Should the ANC not be paying for the Eskom debt their Government amassed? And finally, is the money stolen through corruption and the refusal to spend money timeously maintaining Eskom infrastructure under the Government's watch, aided and abetted by Government cadres but recovered through court cases going to Eskom to lessen the debt burden? The tax-payers are being asked to cover the debt twice: through debt write-offs and high electricity tariffs Eskom is now charging. | Donald George | retired |

The customers have already paid eskom/ municipalities for the electricity. Eskoms mismanagement and governments inaction's have brought Eskom to its knees. Bailing Eskom out wont fix the problem. Sell Eskom Off and allow private enterprises in to compete and delivery reliable electricity. Perhaps some debt can be written off from Eskoms pension scheme, and municipality hand outs stopped to pay the portions that they have effectively stolen. | 2023-04-2108:58:33 | Gauteng        | No I do not | Other | This governments use of bail outs as a mechanism to support the patronage network and steal has to come to an end. The state owned enterprises, Eskom included, are just shockingly managed. The issues relating to South Africas power requirements have been known about since Eskom executives raised the flag regarding SA needing to build more capacity back in 1998. That is 25 years ago. If you have been unable to deal with a problem for 25 years and you have not only been unable to solve the problem at hand, but have made the position many times worse, maybe its time to change the approach.This approach of creating a crisis and then forcing a bail out as its the most expedient way out of the problem at the time is just impoverishing us all. If the government was serious about solving the power crisis, they wouldn't be putting up yet more of the same actions that got us here in the first place.The way out of this crisis is not more of the same. The way out is a different approach, it's letting other players into the space, it's about actually prosecuting politically connected people and organizations that defraud and steal from Eskom, it's about letting Eskom become independent with one focused mission and that is to produce abundant cheap electricity, and so the list goes on.As a tax payer I do not want to give Eskom another cent. | Tracy-Lee | employed individual |

| 2023-04-2108:12:31 | KwaZulu-Natal |  | No I do not | Other | While I understand that Eskom is facing financial challenges, I believe that transparency and accountability are essential in ensuring that public funds are used effectively and responsibly. In fact, the South African Constitution includes provisions that require transparency and accountability in government entities. For example, Section 32 of the Constitution provides for the right of access to information held by the state, and Section 195 requires that public administration be governed by the principles of transparency, accountability, and responsiveness.Moreover, the Public Finance Management Act (PFMA) requires public entities to manage their finances in a transparent, accountable, and responsible manner. The PFMA also requires regular reporting on financial performance and compliance with financial management requirements. By exempting Eskom from disclosing financial irregularities, the Finance Minister may be violating these principles of transparency and accountability enshrined in South African law.Therefore, I believe that it is crucial that Eskom is held accountable for their financial actions and that any tax-funded loans granted to them should be conditional upon their compliance with the law. It is important to uphold the principles of transparency and accountability in public entities to ensure that public funds are managed effectively and efficiently. | SERA      | employedindividual |

Furthermore, Eskom is supposed to be self-sufficient and raise funding from electricity sales. The future demise of Eskom is inevitable .Eskom is a SOE owned and run by our very incompetent state/government. The current state/government is riddled with corruption. Unfortunately the current majority government is voted in by RSA voters. Those voters have no right to complain about the increasing electricity costs and continuous rolling load shedding, as they have voted for all of this. Eskom should be 51% privatized which allows for private sector investment and allows for a competent team to take over the reigns of Eskom. Currently Eskom workers demand a 15% wage increase , and increases in the following: housing allowances, medical aid allowance, cell phone allowance, electricity allowance, danger allowance, 15% increase on all other allowances, study benefits, vehicle allowance, paternity leave allowance, etc. etc...Who will fund all of these debt relief, write offs and workers wage demands: Well its all the voters who support the current majority government and all who don't vote for them. Most of the voters will not be able to afford the future cost of electricity, and YES you voted for this state of affairs. So - as Eskom is running towards Level 6 and 7 and then Level 8 blackouts, then look in the mirror and ask yourself who is to blame. Until Eskom sorts out loadshedding no loans should be given to them they've proven incapable of properly managing their finances why should taxpayers be misused like this, when is it going to stop. Whatever the aim about Eskom, as a whole, citizens shouldn't suffer or used as battleground. They live lavish lifestyles with funded generators solar power "off the grid" whilst the person-in-the street suffers! Many employees in Eskom are privileged employees who have too many "gravy-train-type salaries allowances and other incomes". The issue of the new power stations being inefficient is a shock reality to me. The absence of consequence management iro given more privileges. The consistent failure to properly maintain the infrastructure of power across South Africa is a greater issue but corruption is linked to the lack of maintenance plus sabotage.. A more responsible method to raise money would be to hand the existing electricity production and distribution over to competent private entities and raise a royalty from the proceeds. This will assist in closing the black hole of future municipal debt albeit that sadly, existing debt, from which the financial relief should have been funded from, will have to be written off.   | Cheryl                 | employedindividual |

How can you upgrade any infrastructure when the people in charge of the government is telling the very finances needed and taking it out of the country or buying properties overseas because they can see they are not going to be in power next year Please!!!!Please note that this has now gone far enough. No Debt relief must be given to Eskom!!! Every minister who has been involved and all the criminals that are benefitting from this chaos since it started must now be found and held accountable. This is where the back stops. Eskom wants to increase with a 15 price hike because of people who can not do their jobs and are failing at it. This is unacceptable!!! No one is entitled to an increase because they all are accessories to the stealing of Billions of Rands of Money from the tax payers pockets. They must all be arrested and be jailed !! All assets must be seized from every single ANC member and other constituents who has been part of the stealing!!! The gangs must be rounded up and all assets seized as well as every single sent. The only way this will stop is for the government in power to be arrested as well as all their friends who got all the tenders investigated as well as all assets seized. Illegal connections must be permanently removed and people who reconnect them must be arrested. Then they all must pay back the monies through every sent card vehicle bank accounts wherever in the world and properties seized overseas as well. Then we will see the deepness of the stealing !!!!! Stop the AMC from having anymore hold over this country and arrest all. Finish and Klaar!! They are and have been the biggest coup who has stolen openly and never been reprimanded. | 2023-04-1411:45:17 | KwaZulu-Natal |  | No I do not | Other | There are several reasons why it would be unwise for the South African Treasury to advance Eskom a loan. Some of these reasons include:1. Eskom's poor financial performance: Eskom has been experiencing financial difficulties for several years, with the company struggling to generate enough revenue to cover its costs. This has resulted in Eskom accumulating a significant amount of debt. As such, advancing a loan of this size to Eskom could be seen as enabling poor financial management and creating a moral hazard.2. Corruption allegations: Eskom has been embroiled in several corruption scandals over the years, with allegations of corruption and mismanagement being levelled against the company's management and board members. Advancing a loan to Eskom without first addressing these corruption allegations could be seen as condoning such behaviour and may be perceived as acting against the interests of the public.3. Lack of transparency: There are concerns that the process of awarding a loan to Eskom may not be transparent, and that there may be conflicts of interest involved. This lack of transparency could undermine public trust in the Treasury and in the government as a whole.4. Legal challenges: Advancing a loan to Eskom could be challenged in court if there are concerns that the process was not transparent or that it was influenced by conflicts of interest. This could lead to lengthy legal battles, which would further delay the resolution of Eskom's financial difficulties.5. Alternative solutions: There may be alternative solutions to Eskom's financial problems that do not involve a loan from the Treasury. For example, the government could consider restructuring Eskom or introducing competition into the energy sector. Advancing a loan to Eskom may be seen as a short-term solution that does not address the root causes of the company's financial difficulties.Overall, it will be unwise for the South African Treasury to advance Eskom a loan without first addressing these concerns and considering alternative solutions to the company's financial difficulties. | Kyle      | employedindividual |

How stupid does government think the SA citizen are?! To literally make it law and condone and rub our noses in it that corruption & theft from the mouths of the SA citizens goes unnoticed and unchallenged. You have to be kidding me.It's actually quite simple: Minister Godongwana MUST as a matter of urgency continue with the investigations into disclosing the HUGE financial irregularities of this entity and all the corruption, syndicates, thieves and he should prosecute against all the years of theiving, and simply by obtaining that money, including the seizing of assets of all those involved in Eskom's corruption, the minister will have his billions back. That can then get plowed back into a privatised Eskom that has to keep shareholders happy, that has to perform like a functioning business, and where non-performance AND corruption are dealt with correctly. How many employees have they suspended with pay due to 'allegedly' committing fraud? How long have these employees been sitting at home with full pay where their cases have not been finalised as yet? Is the entity over staffed? Are their current Employees, across the board, skilled enough to perform their duties? Are there any consequences for the citizens that do not pay their Eskom bills? Are there any consequences for the Municipalities that do not pay their Eskom bills? Does it come down to bad management? Are the unions too much involved in telling Eskom how they must manage the company? How many tariff hikes must the consumers further endure? When is enough- enough? How much more money do you want to bleed from the tax payers?Once we have workable solutions to all the questions above, then we will be able to move forward. | 2023-04-1214:53:22 | Gauteng           | No I do not | Other | Why are these State owned entities constantly getting public bail outs? There have been investigations into the corruption and financial mismanagement of funds around Eskom for years now, yet they continue to get bail outs and it always comes back to the taxpayers to fund those bail outs. If there's mismanagement and corruption, which there evidently is because Eskom is constantly being bailed out, then by agreeing to write off their debt and give them more money we are funding corruption directly. And government's willingness to do this makes them complicit. As a taxpayer, if I don't pay my bills, my services are stopped, my house is repossessed, if I have a business and it can't pay it's suppliers etc, it goes into debt review or into administration where the people who are owed get the proceeds of the company's assets being sold off etc. There's no help for we honest, hard-working citizens when we can't pay, yet Eskom is constantly given billions of Rands and none of it ever seems to get them any closer to fixing the problems. It's just stolen. It must come to an end. Where are the honest few who will finally stand up to corruption and put some of these crooks in jail? The saddest part is that those running this circus have no conscience, show no remorse, show no desire or willingness to put and end to this blatant crime. And they don't care what people do or say, nobody will ever end up in jail for their crimes because they're all as guilty as each other. So my objection to this is because in supporting it I would be as complicit as them. In a country where people are starving to death because they're unable to find work to feed themselves and their families, I cannot in good conscience support a decision which would push them further and further from ever getting the help they need because some greedy thieves have stolen money that could be going to help the poor. | Steve     | employedindividual |

| 2023-04-1214:22:10 | WesternCape   |        | No I do not | Other | My primary reason for NOT supporting the proposed bill is: No proper plan has been made available for public scrutiny to address all of Eskom's shortcomings in terms of capacity, corruption, bloated salary bills, technical capability, etc. Public statements made to date are vague and unsupported. Eskom should not receive public money without accounting for itself to the public. The ANC Government is, for example, currently actively blocking Parliamentary scrutiny and oversight aimed at exposing and dealing with corruption at Eskom. This is irrational. At this stage, the only solutions offered to deal with the ANC Government's continued corruption, incompetence and maladministration in dealing with Eskom is for the public to foot Eskom debt, either through raising tariffs, providing loans/write-offs with public money or both. The ANC Government should be charged with the heinous crime of driving Eskom into the ground. It is inconceivable that Eskom could be in its current state after more than two decades of loud and clear warnings. Dropping this matter in the public's lap after such incompetence and corruption is utterly irrational and presents no lasting solution. The ANC Government's continued communist ideology to oppose private energy supply, drag their feet to approve such projects, and especially its slow progress towards adding renewable energy to our supply has to a huge extent contributed to a lack of generation capacity. Now this lack of capacity is cited by the same ANC Government as good reason to revert back to more coal powered generation. This is criminal. It smacks of political agendas and corruption. These same folks cannot simply say "Trust us, we will fix it". No more! The public needs to see what the ANC Government and Eskom actually plans to do to resolve matters. The public must scrutinize this plan. The public must accept a plan. The Government must execute this plan. All BEFORE using public money in any way. | Thomas     | employedindividual |

I think this is another political tool at best and very likely and a cash injection to facilitate looting as I have no reason to believe otherwise. You cannot keep on throwing good money after bad without changing something. My belief is that Eskom, as a generation entity is caught up in a self destructive loop. [It is absurd that I can see this when the people that makes these laws do not, nobody can be that stupid] To explain the loop - Eskom does loadshedding, people find alternatives, Eskom gets less income, increases rates per kw/h. Less people now can afford electricity so they either steal it, just don't pay it or fund solar. Electricity price increases and knock on economic impact means goods become more expensive so Eskom goes on strike and loadshedding gets worse meaning more people goes solar or stop paying.... and so the loop continues until Eskom has a handful of people paying for electricity at 1BN ZAR per KW/hour to fund Eskom's operations and everyone else is using solar, gas or just do without. For the umpteenth time - if you want to fix Eskom - <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>-Get rid of unskilled/poorly skilled labor, employ skilled resources even if they do not fit BEE criteria</li> <li>-Stop using contractors for BAU maintenance; use the thousands of staff on the books and make them to their job</li> <li>-Remove BEE Criteria and other discriminatory labor practices as a requirement for employment</li> <li>-Subject all Eskom employees and contractors to annual lifestyle audit and mandatory polygraph tests</li> <li>-Recover moneys fairly for all consumers [barring a basic kw/h maybe 150kw/h for all private individuals people funded from tax base]</li> <li>-CAPEX longterm projects; do not fund it from OPEX</li> <li>-Reduce the billions of debt draining OPEX from Eskom, use this R150 BN to pay off some of the legacy debt rather than facilitating new debt and operational shortfalls.</li> <li>-Reduce Overhead costs especially people cost; my sense is total people overhead resembles a 4 to 1 headcount ratio to other power operators in the Western developed world</li> <li>-Invest in Nuclear energy but not a R11 trillion deal at significantly inflated costs. | 2023-04-1203:37:00 | Gauteng       | No I do not | Other | Enough of the coverups, lies & blatant theft! ANOTHER Eskom debt bail-out? A resounding NO! Until the corruption in Eskom is properly addressed, the perpetrators charged and prosecuted (for a change) and Eskom's house is made openly accountable and put in order, this will again be throwing good money after bad. The South African public have to service their debts – no matter how poor they are, or else face criminal prosecution. Eskom now needs to step up and take care of their own debt. The current funds from electricity tariffs as well as collecting debts owed by municipalities that are in arrears should cover Eskom's debt over time. No steps have been taken to openly and publicly address the recently exposed corruption. | Keith       | employed individual |

Till this happens and the government has the balls to take the necessary actions, cadres in jail and pensions taken away because of theft, to recoup some of the losses. Illegal connection to the infrastructure removed and perpetrators lock up, governance on the purchasing offices where the fairest prices are used to purchase the required items, not like now here a mop that cost R 70-00 is being bought for R500-00 plus, that is day light robbery, and the purchasing officer needs to explain and so does the person approving the GROSS over spenditure. And dont forget about the cadre's who are employed at great cost to eskom that have no value to the company but are there to grase the wheels of corruption and out right thievery. | Vernon   | employedindividual |

Cut all bonuses to Eskom until they have achieved the required goals of NO Loadshedding. Load shedding is costing South Africa millions and investors will be reluctant to invest in an economy that is dying. Bring back the people that left and fix Eskom. Impose a DMR on Eskom based on misappropriation of funds, abused delegation of authority, CLOSE admin - impose and audit and sort out the hole where funds are being squandered on a select few. MANY people are suffering to support the "very few" yet WELL compensated employees and delegates of Eskom. Private companies MUST pay tax, MUST declare financials and be tax compliant - Eskom CANNOT be tax compliant yet SARS has not shut them down? And where is the national treasury going to get R184billion? Eskom, unfortunately, as has been proven by Andre de Ruyter, is so riddled with corruption that this exorbitant amount of money to bale out this sinking ship is in all likelihood going to disappear into someone's pocket. It is time that electricity in South Africa was privatised, so that it could be competitive and cost effective for those who pay for it. Alternatively, Eskom must supply electricity to those who don't pay for it, and those who do pay for it must be allowed to use an alternative service provider. South Africans as a whole are done with Eskom. | Ashley   | employedindividual |

It is another plan to continue with the stealing for longer. The president does not have the will or guts to arrest his merry men who are behind the breakdown of what was a working utility. No matter how much is pumped into the utility until they appoint people who are independent of political interference from Mantashe and Gordaan it will be thieving business as usual. It is convenient to ensure that for another 4 years money will be pumped in , not for use to fix the problem but to ensure those thieves are still able to continue with their blood money. The public are not stupid. The ANC fatcats are laughing all the way to the bank whilst South Africa bleeds. Like with the Sanral, let us stand together and say "no" enough is enough. Are those working for Eskom " too stupid" to fix the problem?. How convenient is it not that the ANC got rid of all those who can fix the problem? Help to stop this craziness. Anyone who thinks this is a good plan must be really ignorant or be part of the merry band stealing millions from Eskom. They have fine tuned the system. The fatcats want to ensure it continues. Now that DeRuiter has gone the group must make sure that more money is available to steal. Theft disguised as a so called plan to improve Eskom? Do they think we cannot see through their plotting and planning for self- enrichment? The shame is that we take it over and over - knowing what their intentions are. This is our money they are planning to again steal under the guise of helping out the utility. SA is bleeding to death and the fatcat ANC decision makers of the president, Mantashe, Gordaan and the finance minister are laughing all the way to the bank. Eskom is corrupt, massively overstaffed and has no skilled labour. Where are the Engineers to plan and carry out repairs and maintenance? Gone because they aren't wanted, the seat warmers that do nothing but earn a salary will fix the problem. Where is the forensic audit to discover where Eskom's funds are being bled out (stolen)? Finance Minister Enoch Godongwana wants to exempt Eskom from disclosing irregular, fruitless, and wasteful expenditure? Why? How many ANC officials, cadre deployees, hangers on, tenderpreneur family members, and friends will be caught with their hands in the till if a forensic audit takes place? Eskom doesn't need more money, it needs to clean house. Eskom cannot be allowed to up prices to repay a "loan" (which, I assure you, will be written off once the money has been "re-appropriated"). What is needs, is to privatise so that the various parasites can be removed and the country's grid can start recovering.And then, to add cream to the pie, the minister can delegate anyone they want into position of power so long as that person doesn't get caught and make the minster look bad. Debt collection must be a priority, BEFORE SOMEONE'S account runs into millions!! Why should we, the taxpayers, have to continually bail out the state-owned entities when corrupt personnel are dipping into the coffers and spending without accountability. We need proper business people to run Eskom and the other entities: people who know the value of using money wisely, for the correct purposes and not mismanaging and wasting it. Why has there been no auditing done, to check on unauthorised expenditure? Why do those in the management of Eskom continue to live a wonderful lifestyle when the place is in financial ruin, while leaving already cash-strapped people to pay back this fortune which was done by ESKOM. | 2023-04-1910:54:30 | Gauteng           |  | No I do not | Direct charges for requirements of Eskom | I think the problem lies with all the Municipalities not paying Eskom, as they are also not collecting all outstanding debt. The money they collect is being used to pay ridiculous high salaries and just been wasted. They then don't pay Eskom and then Eskom want to be bailed out buy treasury. They also ask for an increase in their tariff. The people that can keep paying do so, but those that can't still get supplied with electricity. So the cycle starts all over again. Fewer people pay and Eskom ask for more money from treasury. I think Eskom should collect all out standing Debt from all the Municipalities and if they do not pay, all people who are not paying for their electricity should be cut off. All Municipalities should be checked to see if they have the correctly qualified people in charge of every department in each Municipality in order to do the correct job, deliver service to the people, fix all the roads, traffic lights, water supply collect all outstanding debt and run more efficiently. Once the municipalities collect all outstanding debt and pay their suppliers things could change. The ruling party do just not have the will and knowledge to run our Country, they are just enriching themselves as a payback from Apartheid and do not care about the masses that keep voting for them. | stathy        | employedindividual |

Increasing debt and making the end user pay does NOT resolve the problems inside of Eskom. The more the internal issues are delayed the bigger the problem just becomes for everyone. Considering that the municipalities want the electricity tariff to apply to affluent areas just means more and more subsidizing. We cannot bail them out time and time again to our detriment . With all the corruption in the company it would be like handing them more money to steal. They cannot even provide the service that they are suppose to provide. I have no confidence in this company at all and really feel a bail out would just make a bad situation so much worse.  | Fehrzaana | employed individual |

| 2023-04-1815:40:02 | WesternCape |  | No I do not | Direct charges for requirements of Eskom | I believe that the Eskom Debt Relief Bill should not be supported for several reasons. Firstly, the proposed direct charge against the National Revenue Fund will divert billions of rands away from other essential sectors such as healthcare, education, and infrastructure development. This could have negative long-term consequences for the country's overall economic growth and development. Secondly, the Bill sets a dangerous precedent by providing a financial bailout to Eskom, a state-owned enterprise with a track record of financial mismanagement and corruption. Eskom's debt burden has been largely attributed to poor management and misappropriation of funds, which means that providing a large loan without addressing the underlying issues may not be an effective solution. Lastly, opponents of the Bill argue that it does not address the root causes of Eskom's financial difficulties. Instead of providing a large loan, the government should focus on reforming Eskom's management and operations to ensure that it becomes a more efficient and sustainable organization. This would require addressing issues such as corruption, mismanagement, and the need for investment in renewable energy sources. In conclusion, I believe that the Eskom Debt Relief Bill is a risky move that could have negative economic consequences and sets a bad precedent for future financial bailouts. The government should instead focus on addressing the root causes of Eskom's financial difficulties to ensure that the organization becomes more sustainable and efficient in the long term. | Juan             | employedindividual |

| 2023-04-1808:54:10 | KwaZulu-Natal |  | No I do not | Direct charges for requirements of Eskom | Government is failing to deal with corruption and the Eskom fiasco is a typical case. An independent auditor company needs to be appointed and allied with prosecutors to identify all corrupt Eskom officials, then charge them with crimes and seize their assets which must be diverted back to Eskom's account. New management needs to be appointed which is not politically affiliated with government leaders and properly screened to have no prior history of illegal activities and which is willing to implement a policy that every Eskom-supplied end-user pays for their electricity. A special police unit must be formed and supported by the army to identify illegal connections, disable these and arrest people with illegal connections to charge them with theft. Only after all of the above has been implemented can the government bail out Eskom partially just to keep it able to produce electricity and not to write the debt off which must still be recovered from municipalities owing Eskom. | Michael     | employedindividual |

Taxpayers are under enough stress as is and cannot afford bailing Eskom out every time they have debt. No loans should be given to them as the country can use that large sum of money for bettering the lives of South Africans, not a corrupt business that can't stay afloat or even deliver services properly. If they are failing at running their business (which they are), they should be shut down and other alternatives should be available for South Africans to get electricity from. Is there anything specific you would like help with today? sedick.khan786@gmail.comCan you please rewrite the following in a more professional manner: Dear Commission, Personally, I think that the POPAI Act is unethical. It is unethical simply because I feel that information that is deliberately attempted to be kept away from the the citizens simply means government wants to hide away the abuse of public funds. The citizens who is also the funders of any form of services that the public bearers provide has the right to know how the money is spend, and not just in a example high level expenditure report but in comprehensive detail. Not only is it our right to know the above, it is also our right to know who the officials is that requested the required goods/services and infrastructure and who recommends, approves and authorise the expenditures irrespective of the authorative delegated amounts. Sincere,A concerned citizen Dear Commission, I respectfully express my concerns regarding the POPAI Act, which I believe to be unethical. In my opinion, deliberately withholding information from citizens suggests an attempt by the government to conceal the misuse of public funds. As the primary financiers of public services, citizens have a right to a comprehensive understanding of how their money is being spent, including detailed reports on expenditures, as well as information on the officials responsible for requesting, recommending, approving, and authorizing expenditures, regardless of the delegated amounts. |            |                     |

No. So why should the tax payer continue paying for corrupt ANC cadres and politicians theft AND have made a total dogs breakfast of Eskom. Eskom needs to be rescued by people who understand business principles and accountability. This would result in wage freezes or reduction, dismissal of incompetent or redundant staff, out sourcing non core function, and straight firing of those conflicted or corrupt. Those that don't pay have services terminated. Eskom is selling a service. So why not run it as such. It should not need bailouts. If it over charges, people can go elsewhere. if it under charges it goes bankrupt. To charge a competitive price is has to shed freeloaders and have remuneration related to market returns. Bail outs solve nothing and have to be in perpetuity if the reasons for debt are not addressed. | Ann       | employed individual |

Providing further funds to relieve the ESKOM debt may have the desired effect in the short term i.e diminish load-shedding, but is unlikely to address the root causes eg. corruption, poor management, theft, sabotage and other iniquities. Without the appointment of competent, responsible and honest people who are permitted to execute their mandate without political interfering, fear or favour, ESKOM will continue to be a bottomless financial pit.Furthermore, this debt relief will need to be repaid. | 2023-04-1414:13:38 | Western Cape | No I do not | Direct charges for requirements of Eskom | ESKOM is a SOE. ESKOM is owned and run by the ANC. The ANC is a corrupt, thieving, kleptocratic organization that has done nothing but obliterate and destroy everything they touched. ESKOM get bailed out over and over again and absolutely nothing changes. They get deeper and deeper into debt while we pay more and more and have less and less electricity. They recycle incompetent management and we even have a Minister of Electricity now .... who knows nothing and will accomplish nothing. The more they are bailed out, the more they steal. The one person who was honest about what is going on at ESKOM, André de Ruyter, was almost killed and they still deny the corruption, thievery and sabotage. Eskom keeps raising their tariffs, but loadshedding is not getting less. All this is doing is hiding irregularities (stealing money), and then allow them debt relief, in other words cover up the money stolen. On what planet does any institute not disclose any financial irregularities, especially if it is public funds used? This is just absolute nonsense! Also if you have a track record of no maintenance, loadshedding and mismanagement of funds! This is the exact criteria why every should be transparent and above board. Giving them more money and hiding any mis-spending just shows the government's stance on corruption.. infact it looks like they are trying to hide it...   | Pierre      | employed individual |

Corrupt individuals have stolen the money and don't even stand trial. Now ESCOM wants a get out of jail free card....just like the other corrupt people. It is like giving a child a sweet or gift after they have been naughty! This just encourages them to continue in the same manner as before. Nothing will change and we will need to bail them out of their debt again and again, just as we have done with the other delinquent SOEs. | 2023-04-1318:04:52 | Gauteng      | No I do not | Direct charges for requirements of Eskom | The proposed structure of the relief will place an undue burden on the fiscus. The inherent problem with relief of this nature is similar to the various bailouts that were granted for SAA - it places no obligation on the SOE to reform itself into an organisation that is profitable on its own merits. If the utility can always run to national government for a bailout, what incentive is there to do anything to cut costs and increase output? If this is not done, then debt relief will mean nothing.Eskom must first show its hand in reducing fruitless and wasteful expenditure, of which there is plenty, before any reasonable citizen would consider funding an entity on a downward trajectory.Banks don't lend to failing businesses. | 2023-04-1315:51:18 | Western Cape |  | No I do not | Direct charges for requirements of Eskom | Eskom has been taking us for a ride since 2007. We suffer and have to fork out hundreds of rands every month to have electricity which half the time, we don't have because of loadshedding. Eventually, when things go back to normal and we no longer have to deal with loadshedding people will not be able to afford electricity because it will cost so much to have electricity 24/7. At the moment, with loadshedding there is some relief in terms of how much electricity people need to buy. Majority of the country cannot keep up with the price of basic essentials. I live in a household where there are 2 incomes and still it's not enough to cover everything we need. Eskom needs to take responsibility for the corruption taking place within the organisation and keep the people out of it. We have and are suffering enough just to scrape by. | 2023-04-1313:58:21 | WesternCape   |  | No I do not | Direct charges for requirements of Eskom | We the people of South Africa have had enough – Eskom’s mismanagement and corruption must stop - we are taxed to death, our electricity tariff is exorbitant and we don’t have power most of the time. The funding of Eskom has been a bottomless pit because it is corruption and sabotage on a grand scale which gobbles up the funds the government has poured into it - paid by us, the taxpayers. Deal first with the corruption, which seems to start with government ministers. Trace the stolen funds and get the money back and then decide how much is still needed to pay the debts of this failed SOE, and then sell it to be run by a private enterprise tasked to salvage what can be restored and close the rest. The funds, at present, in question should be used to build up this new structure. No debt relief of any sort should even be contemplated until the root causes have been addressed - overstaffing, failure to maintain and repair power generation equipment, the ubiquitous corruption and overcharging for procurement, and the ridiculously high salaries which bear no relation to the marketplace. Fixing these real problems according to a pre-agreed timetable must be a condition of any debt relief of any and all future financial support for Eskom. If money is stolen or misused, those who have done this need to go to prison. Handing over this astronomical amount over four years will destroy our country and we will still be having blackouts. It seems odd to me that we never ever knew what a load shedding was from van Riebeeck's day until 1993 when the ANC took over. Eskom blew their chances when they lost van der Ruiter. Rather make a real effort to recover all the stolen funds that resulted in this debt and reduce the bloated work force at Eskom to further save money that can be used to repair the generating units and infrastructure. Rather address the sabotage of infrastructure so that it costs less to maintain and repair. Rather bring the idle generating units online as promised by the minister of electricity. As much as I understand that Eskom needs financial assistance to bail them out from the losses due to previous and ongoing fraud and corruption, I don't see how this now ends up as our cost and not theirs. We pay taxes, and we pay Eskom. Both these payments seem to disappear down a black hole, since we don't get quality government services and we certainly don't get the electricity due to us. Our government schooling, our roads, our police force etc have all fallen short of what is expected and required of them. So where is our Tax money actually going??? Where is the R184bill that South Africans previously paid to Eskom gone? It's gone to fraud and corruption!!! Now you have the audacity to take even more. It's wrong and I'm sure you know that. Taxpayers are under extreme financial stress already and now being asked to once again bail out Eskom who apparently have no interest in acknowledging their mismanagement of funds never mind being held accountable for it. To me, bailing them out again will only lead to more of the same and their loans will not be repaid as promised as though their mismanagement of funds hasn't already spiraled out of control. Clearly the asset value of Eskom needs to be known to sell it. Clearly the bloated staff needs to be attended to. Eskom needs to compete in a free market environment.2. Taxpayer loan to the municipalities in debt to Eskom. Private administration of these municipalities similar to administration of insolvent companies, until such time as the municipality is solvent and can be turned back to political parties democratically elected. Clearly the government is not capable via cogta or whatever of taking over these delinquent municipalities.3. Asset forfeiture and corruption charges for the thieves.4. Once the numbers are known about the cost of privatizing, the government can retain as a less than 50% shareholding in Eskom traded on the stock exchange.5. Eskom should buy solar as part of distribution.The upside of this is saving on all the salaries and expenses of all the extra government posts such as SOE department, minister of electricity etc. Taxpayers can then expect a dividend from a profitable entity instead of just paying for corruption. While I acknowledge Eskom should be - not for profit - a small profit to pay dividend similar to the repo rate is acceptable. Why continue to feed the thieves and fatcats. Obviously, the idea came from or is intended to enable the theft to continue. There will be no " relief". This plan is to increase the amount being syphoned to individual pockets. Now another looter has joined the " merry men" benefitting whilst the country bleeds. This money belongs to South Africans who struggle to keep the lights on. What a clever plot to keep their pockets being filled. First they got rid of everyone who knew how to run a power utility, then they crafted clever plans to enrich themselves and now they are moving money around to make their loot piles greater. No matter how much they pump into Eskom, until the root cause ( thieves in government) are arrested there will be no change). The ANC are experts at plotting and planning for personal gain but have zero will or competence when it comes to fixing Eskom. The worst is that South Africans know what is going on but are too complacent to say or better yet do something to stop this looting - whilst the fat cats laugh all the way. | 2023-04-2108:12:53 | WesternCape   |  | No I do not | Other | The request for R254 billion in Eskom debt relief over the next year will take the total of state support to R495.6 billion . And how will this debt be serviced? Taxpayer money and increased tariffs. The fiscus and SA economy can no longer afford - or be held accountable - to bail out Eskom. Eskom has failed dismally in its responsibility and accountability to manage the energy infrastructure in SA adequately. Ex CEO de Ruyter has exposed the real issues underpinning Eskom's demise, which are largely attributable to political interference and blatant corruption. To date, absolutely no action appears to have been taken to bring the corrupt Ministers and state employees to book, or to recover the funds that were stolen from the Eskom bail out funds to date. It is equally disturbing that no effort has yet been made to address the attempted murder of de Ruyter as CEO. This does not promote any faith or trust in the ANC's intention to honour the rights and needs of its citizens, or to take accountability for its immoral actions. To throw more money at Eskom without having a reliable and politically independent governance framework in place to monitor spending and to eliminate corruption and waste is simply throwing good, hard-earned taxpayers money after bad. At best it will perpetuate - but more likely exacerbate - the current situation. The time has come to privatise the provision of a cost effective and reliable power infrastructure for South Africa. It is quite clear that the state does not have the capability, will or accountability to deliver on this mission. Eskom has simply become a target for corruption and the self-enrichment of Ministers and political players at the expense of the citizens and economy country. To offer a loan to any entity with absolutely no guarantee - or accountability - to achieve a return on the investment is preposterous. The time for games and denial is over. The buck must stop here. Focus should be on giving incentives for citizens and companies to install their own infractures. Incentivise private entities to provide reliable and cost effective solutions to both business and residents in south africa. We are an entrepreneurial nation and have the capability and will to make this country work. Take Eskom out of the hands of a corrupt and ineffective State and give it to the people to manage for themselves. I do not support any further loans of "debt relief" to an entity that has not managed to deliver, and that can be counted on to continue its strategy of internal corruption and self-interest to "feed itself"- since 2008. | Brenda   | self-employed |

Hell no!While I understand that this is probably the only way to save the utility from the inevitable consequences of decades of corruption and mismanagement, there's HAS to be a time when bailouts like these for SOEs come to an end. Eskom regularly writes of billions in unpaid debt and this has to stop - it's simply not sustainable.In principle, I support the concept of essential services being delivered through state-owned utilities, but then they need to be run as utilities AND NOT as state-owned companies defined by a profit motive. | 2023-04-18 19:56:17 | Western Cape  |  | No I do not | Other | Does our Ruling party not learn from history? How many times have they "bailed out" the other SOEs with no improvement - in fact only a worsening of the situation and problems? It is time that they admit they cannot run them effectively and profitably due to incompetence, mismanagement and corruption. Only when the corruption is addressed and the perpetrators are held accountable, when quality of competent employees is placed above the political agenda of skin colour (BEE) at all costs, when the debts owed by the municipalities etc. are recovered and kept current, and our judicial system effectively deals with the terrorism, theft and vandalism, will Eskom be able to recover and start supplying the service they are being paid to provide. Historically, the Government has failed in all these areas in every SOE. The only time that a (former) SOE has started becoming profitable and started providing a reasonable service was when it was privatized - Telkom. While I am not holding Telkom up as a shining light, at least they are not a drain on the beleaguered tax payer and have shown profits. However, the amount of money Eskom has lost due to bad management and corruption and cancer-causing polluting coal stations could have been used to install solar systems. Especially amongst low-income people: free solar panels and inverters for all poor and tax-paying persons would have been the proper thing to spend our hard-earned tax money on. Instead, the carelessness and recklessness of Eskom continue- billions of rands flow into coal stations, which don't work. I will never support leaders who destroy our environment ( coal stations cause 100's of thousands of deaths annually). Especially when we have SO much sunlight that we could be exporting solar energy- the leaders of Eskom are archaic, outdated, and incapable of running a business- it is NOT fair that we, the hard-working taxpayers, must pay for their lazy, thieving mistakes. No, do not punish us, the innocent- get the money from the thieves that steal from Eskom, get the corrupt staff members to pay back what they stole- Or fire the lot, liquidate Eskom and let private companies take over the energy supply ( through solar, wind, and ocean wave energy- we have the longest coastline ever). | Isabel    | self-employed |

The real issue is who is going to pay for all this. First the minister allows Eskom to hide all the gross stealing, fraud and corruption by declaring that they no longer have to be accountable. Now we will write off Eskom debt. First we the people have to pay for the stealing, fraud and corruption, now we will be saddled with picking up the tab of the written off debt and the loans. Furthermore, Eskom want more money from us too. This means a nice fat price hike and on top of this the municipalities are also debating sharp price increases, as stated in one of the MSM newspapers today. All it really means is putting the full burden on us the people whilst those "in charge" continue to escalate their criminal activities. It is pertinent to state that the time for complete rebellion by the people isn't very far away. If those in control want to remain in their positions then it's time for them to step up and sort out the mess by sorting out the real problems instead of putting them on the shoulders of the taxpayers. | Michael  | self-employed |

We are more likely to feel the impact of mismanagement without any long-term relief to our current electricity supply crisis. And thirdly, poor maintenance of the plants has regularly been the reasons for Eskom's issues so the liability to resolve the issues should fall internally within Eskom ass Eskom has had ample time to address its internal issues. Where the looting has resulted in predictable financial distress to the national budget, the taxpayer is expected to submit to a double tax to close the gap. As a third payment, the taxpayers are expected to submit to a third stealth tax of increased tarrifs for services, which they are increasingly unable to access due to the withholding or intermittent collapse of services due to the financial constraints created by the looting of the very funds surrendered to the state by these very taxpayers. Non-taxpayers are increasingly unable to afford these services due to these increased tarrifs, and are left no option but to turn to crime due to the moribund state of the economy and the result of the extractive financial policies of the government.Of note, the only government department that functions effectively is the very department responsible for collecting the funds that the government plunders unfettered.To write off tax payer funded debt and expect the citizens to simultaneously pay more for the very service that they are increasingly not provided is akin to the taxes visited on the peasant farmers in France that sparked the French Revolution.This government has consistently and persistently hit the "easy targets" hard while failing dismally to call to account those who are creating the problem through theft, fraud and incompetence.They therefore have no right whatsoever to ask us to fund this policy until such time as they deal with the root of the problem as well as recovering the stolen funds that led to a substantial portion of this crisis. | Grace     | self-employed |

Nationalize SARB and issue Treasury bills backed by gold and silver. All assets belong to the people and Government has breached the trust of the people. Then reform Government to deliver services and infrastructure. Reduce Government to deliver the services that we the people demand, security of the people, infrastructure, and leave the social arena to the people. There would be enough work for all the people when we restore the infrastructure of Southern Africa. The people have the power; as one of the people, I say no. If we do not have a Government that is so huge we can save money and spend it on infrastructure. Are either or both of these problems not symptomatic of a very sophisticated money laundering scheme. The debt as a result of money laundered out of Eskom over many years and the breakdowns because, 1 - coal is substituted for stones (as reported by journalists in the past and 2 - constant breakdowns strengthens the argument for outside providers at a very high cost with a handsome kickback to someone. Both of these arguments follow a very similar pattern as exposed by Al Jazeera in its investigation called Gold Mafia. | 2023-04-1615:54:26 | Gauteng        | No I do not | Delegations and authorisations | The SA tax payer should not fit the bail out. Any money provided must be collected from the persons responsible for the debt, not the tax paying citizens. The people responsible should pay back the money that was either stolen or wasteful spend. The municipalities that owe huge amounts to Eskom for unpaid electricity bills should be paying the money owed and if payment is not made the culprits should be cut off with huge load shedding. Lifestyle audits should be done on current and past employees to establish where the money they spend is coming from and then return any money they should not have to Eskom. Government officials should be included in load shedding and be paying their own electricity bills. All of the above should effect recovery of money to Eskom and help to keep the lights on.  | Verginakis                     | self-employed |

If corruption and sabotage ended tomorrow, there would be no need to pay out such large amounts from the tax payers purse. The previous Minister of Finance did not compromise himself and he refused to bail out Eskom, knowing that the money would just be siphoned off and disappear. If Eskom do not have to justify fruitless and wasteful expenditure, can you imagine what nefarious plot the ANC government is cooking up. The current Minister of Finance has clearly been compromised or threatened, so only the citizens of South Africa can do this and push back. There will be no transparency in this deal. No performance bonuses without performance - and performance will be no load shedding. Apply load shedding to areas that do not pay for electricity - it will not change the cash flow. Supply electricity to areas that do pay for electricity - without load shedding - it will increase the cash flow. The government has huge responsibilities - allow the government to do their work, and not sponsor Eskom. I'm sure there are many qualified workers at Eskom as we do have electricity from time to time. The problem is the rot at the top. And unfortunately it is dripping down onto the workers. How many time must the working class bail out the corrupt?? It's been done too many times with no solution in sight. Thus far all we've encountered with The one in charge is corruption and it's very close friends. NO MORE BAIL OUTS!!! | Patrick    | self-employed |

All they needed to do was CARRY ON from where the apartheid govt left off. Loadshedding was born from the loins of the ANC. Under apartheid we had the "normal" failures here and there. But no, lets steal here there and everywhere. From the time ANC started, it's been downhill. Every SOE is in a state of demise. The working class have been milked for almost 30 years to fund the elites and their families lifestyles even when they leave office. They get suspended on full pay, transfered from one department to the next when caught with their fingers in the cookie jar with an increase for good behaviour?. We need a change of government. When wood is rotten it undermines the entire structure, it Must be removed to ensure continued stability and integrity of the existing structure. Butt I think in this case the rotten wood is now 90% of the structure which has collapsed, so a new stronger, "treated" structure is immediately necessary. ?????ENOUGH IS ENOUGH!! | Patrick   | self-employed |

(It is a strong message to say steel abuse misuse you will be ok you will be relieved) Eskom cannot carry on to get relief but behind the scenes plunge us into darkness. Where is the citizens relief on tariffs? My opinion is to have independent companies to audit state entities. I will gladly assist in auditing Eskom. These audits should be used and have the power to be used to remove corrupt people's. Such audits should be independently done by public and not corrupt idiots running SA. I have first hand experience on multiple theft incidents that took place. The issue that Andre De Ruyter raised is old news very old news everyone with little to no knowledge of Eskom's operations should be able to point these irregularities within less than a week. Failure to face the need for such a change is simply the enabling of continued delinquency. Following the change I'm sure we'll start seeing those feeding from the trough quickly changing the stance and ditching coal to avoid the radioactive fallout that would surely follow. The fat cats are fat enough and the billions stolen from this country are going to be worth nothing when SA finally collapses from the rot that has eaten away at the economic foundations of this once great country, much like the pylons toppling over from the ANC supporters stealing the support structures.The ANC needs to take responsibility for the disaster which is ESKOM as well as every other SOE leeching off the backs of the already burdened tax payers. It has become way too accustomed to sweeping the stealing under the rug by simply bailing themselves and the friends and family of the ANC out with dwindling public funds. Corruption, fraud, theft, syndicates and a whole raft of other issues define what Eskom stands for in 2023. Asking the tax payer to pay Eskom twice (once in a loan and then in increased tariffs to repay the loan) is ridiculous. Sell off and privatise Eskom in pieces. There need to be private sector's involved, if this country is to ever TO prove itself to its citizens and the world, its beyond help, not a cent more should be given to this no services monopoly, it's the citizens that now need to rebuild solar, for eskom to transmit, they should be buying electricy, from private owners,, anther entity's like SAA Every relife is useless, there is zero tolerance to looting, but apparently no law to stop it. Beyond that the level of service given by eskom is a joke - we live in constant lack of electricity - Despite the fact that eskom or any other enterprises could harness the natural resources that South Africa has in abundance to create masses of electricity - wind, water, sun - how many more choices do they need - if they had invested this money into renewable electricity we could sell electricity to the whole of Africa - as with so many other things people are getting away with so many illegal activities. | 2023-04-1322:41:52 | Gauteng           |  | No I do not | Direct charges for requirements of Eskom | Firstly there are so many solutions to our problem with electricity but government as usually don't want to make things better but worse. If I , a citizen of SA can come up with a couple of logic ideas that will work to sort out our energy crisis why can the people who run this country not? ( I will answer: corruption, selfishness, pride and thinking that the people owe them something when in fact we don't etc. To many to mention) and in true ANC fashion they want to charge us for solar ? 100% FREE energy from the sun that God gave us how does that make sense but yet again let me answer GREED instead of finding solutions on how this free energy can help us, they want to charge us for something that is FREE. I also believe that loadshedding is not real it's a strategy of getting the citizens of this country to think it's so bad that they have to charge us more for electricity because monies are are being misused as usual and the citizens poor as we are have to foot the bill for people's incompetencies and greed hence no one is acceptable. The government has let us down in all aspects of the word and that's a understatement dealing with people who feel entitled forgetting that they left and the people who stayed behind suffered not them but a discussion for another day. Hence our youth feel entitled because we have a government who put stupid policies in place that have no boundaries to suit their own agenda or stupidity. We are going nowhere very fast and our children will have no future. ANC just go !!!!!we really really don't need you. Your time has come to just give it over to someone else who I'm.sure will do a FAR better job than you ( but who knows it's politics) but I believe we can't get any worse than this. You have stripped this country blind and the freedom you so boast about that you claim you have us is not freedom at all but hell on earth. Everything you have touched in this country has failed and you collectively are not worthy to be our leaders now, then or in the future. It's the same as , why are we providing cheaper petrol to our neighbouring places but we pay an arm and a leg for petrol how does that make sense.. We get ripped off with everything, housing , cars , goods, electricity, food etc because the leaders in AFRICA are driven by greed. We have sold our resources to the west and they have been exploiting us from the dark ages and nothing absolutely nothing has been done about it because of greed and falling prey to the western system. We in Africa should be the SUPER POWER because God gave it all to us THE GARDEN OF EDEN but no we have been so brain washed you don't wake up to the fact that we are actually the powerful ones and the system was do designed to keep us subdued and poor. Anyway it's rubbish that you want to pay off this debt and make the people pay for it and as usual without anyone taking responsibility or actually even if there is a person who had a solution you always make sure you shut them down because you want it all to fail and the citizens to keep bailing you out lining your pockets while we all get poorer, NO SURPRISE, BUT EVERY DOG HAS ITS DAY!!!! | NomamaNovakakubi | self-employed |

Rather leave your money under the mattress as our leadership has shown it's far safer there. Public officials can use their pension funds and get the pic to fund this no brainer. Eskom needs to be managed as a business and report dividends to every tax payer that funds this monopoly. Losses are to be drawn through cost mitigation, cutting of 13 th and 14 th cheques and massive perks. Let's not forget eskoms credit rating 30 years ago was better than the republic...common new generation can't you take a challenge, guess not as all we hear is excuses.....blah blah blah. It is totally unjust to expect the taxpayers of South Africa (who are already suffering due to all the load shedding destroying businesses and jobs) to have to spend more hard earned money on an organisation that is operated by incompetent and corrupt management and staff. Fix the corruption and incompetence first and then consider imposing well reasoned and structured increases that the tax payer will find more acceptable. Eskom has now reached the stage where its supply capacity is significantly lower than what is needed, resulting in throttling electricity supply to its users, with a substantial negative effect on our economy, including the decline of our international ratings and attractiveness to investors.</li> <li>4. Now our government wants to pass the buck for Eskom's mess.</li> <li>5. The Minister of Finance and our parliament, in their wisdom, want to exempt Eskom from disclosing financial irregularities so that taxpayers have no transparency of Eskom's 'irregularities' when the culprits should actually be in jail.</li> <li>6. On top of this, our dear Minister also wants to approve a R184 billion loan and debt write-off that taxpayers will pay for twice - once in terms of taxation and on an ongoing basis in terms of electricity purchases.</li> <li>7. WHAT AN ABSOLUTELY BRILLIANT PLAN!</li> <li>8. The only small niggle is that it doesn't solve the problem.</li> <li>9. In fact it probably worsens the situation as the next cadre of Eskom beneficiaries line up for their (protected) turn at the trough.</li> </ol> | Nick      | self-employed |

At a time when there are allegations of large scale corruption, followed by the a questionable decision stating that corruption does not have to be reported, followed by a request to have large amounts of money poured into Eskom so it can be looted. Eskom is able to do its job but only is the resources are not looted. More money will not generate more electricity but will only result in more theft. Where will we find men of integrity, men true to principle as the needle on a compass is true to the magnetic north pole? Throwing money at an organization incapable of managing its resources is no solution to the problem. | 2023-04-1516:25:54 | WesternCape   |  | No I do not | Other | Eskom, the national power utility of South Africa, has been plagued by a host of problems in recent years, including financial mismanagement, corruption, and operational inefficiencies. These problems have led to frequent blackouts and load shedding, which have had a detrimental impact on the economy and the daily lives of South Africans. In response, various proposals have been put forward to address the issue, including the recent debt relieve proposal to save Eskom. However this proposal is not a solution to the problem at hand.The proposal leaves Eskom open to continued criminal activities, which have been a major contributing factor to the utility's problems. Corruption and financial mismanagement have been rampant at Eskom, with reports of kickbacks, inflated contracts, and other forms of fraud. These activities have not only cost the utility billions of rands but have also undermined its ability to provide reliable electricity to the country.Furthermore the problem with Eskom runs deeper than just the need for restructuring. The utility is managed by people who are incapable of doing what they are supposed to do. This lack of competence and accountability has allowed criminal activities to flourish and has contributed to the operational inefficiencies that have plagued Eskom.To truly address the problem the root cause of the issue must be tackled, namely criminality. The solution lies in the removal of the criminal element from Eskom and the implementation of strong governance structures to ensure that the utility is managed effectively and efficiently.In conclusion, while the proposal to provide debt relieve to Eskom may be a step in the right direction, it is not a panacea for the utility's problems. To truly address the issue, the root cause must be tackled, and strong governance structures must be put in place to ensure that Eskom is managed effectively and efficiently. | 2023-04-1319:48:51 | WesternCape   | No I do not | Other | If there is any where near the unbridled corruption De Ruyter reported; i.e. multiple thousands being paid per floor mop; stones being placed amongst coal being delivered to cheat the weigh bridge at point of delivery; sabotage of electrical generation systems, etc. Then we paying for wanton sabotage against the economy. As the ever increasing cost of power feeds directly into the overall economy causing unnecessary inflation of pricing. This impacts every citizen, rich or poor. Those wealthy enough simple migrate to well functioning economies; while those that do not have that choice, find their basket of goods; mostly necessities continue shrinking as prices for these escalate. This has an additional knockon effect – as those that could invest and create employment choose to move their business offshore, adding many thousands to the list of those unemployed or underemployed. On the other side of the divide, poverty simply deepens. With that, the potential for civil unrest grows. The state via its Treasury can absorb Eskom's debit – its simply issues a Money Bill and more money is created. There is no mystery concerning this, as its done in almost every developed nation at some point or other. This money creation – which is fully described within Modern Monetary Theory – which stems from Keynesian economic theory – allows a sovereign state, using its own currency, to extend money supply to cover what it deems is for the Public Good. Therefore the loan in question being issued to draw down debit at Eskom definitely fits within this theory. What does not however fit, is that it appears that little is being done to recover masses of revenue fraudantly paid over to unscrupulous thugs, tender 'free-wheelers' that care less about growing poverty but more about enriching themselves – as De Ruyter was allegedly 'informed': "you must allow others to eat" (I'm paraphrasing). Tragically many others less fortune end up having nothing to eat due to unbridled greed South Africa is exposed to on many levels related to 'state business'. Citizens should not be left carrying the can because the state refuses to address criminal activity relating to its SOE's and delinquent tender fulfillment. This proposed loan which the state moves to saddle the utility end user with unacceptable cost loan to compensate for criminal activities that enrich those connected to supply chains to SOE's including Eskom. This will eventually cripple the state and the end result, once ordinary citizens have hit a brick wall, will be serious insurrection including plundering. I trust that this outcome will not happen, but continuing down the path we are firmly on, I see no other possible outcome. Desperate people do desperate things. If such an event as occurred between the 9th to 18th July 2021; remanifested but on a nationwide basis; there would be no way the state security could deal with such wide spread chaos. Simply put, the country would be rendered to ashes; and with that any hope of investment or recovery. This scenario has been predicted by experts with far more knowledge than I have. To put it bluntly, I would not blame those that choose to plunger; as the state itself provided the example – they have been fingered as the arch plunders – all that would have occurred is that the masses of people that should have lead by good principled example, simply decided to join in the plundering. This is a situation in which you cannot have your cake and eat it. Yes Eskom needs to be placed on a firm financial foundation, BUT that should not be at the cost of ordinary citizens being ripped off further. Almost every single day I see poverty stricken people walk past my home carrying firewood which they walk for kilometres to collect in order to cook and warm themselves. This gathering of would has increased over the 6 years I have resided in my small town, Vanrhynsdorp. This is directly caused by the massive increase in the cost of electricity. There has also been an increase in crime as well as begging – all of which signal that grinding poverty is on the increase. For the reasons above I argue that any further increase of cost for electricity is not justified and will be hugely detrimental to the economy and the stability of the country. We could reach a point were the last straw breaks the camels back literally. | Michael   | unemployedindividual |

Unless the corruption in Eskom is properly addressed, criminals prosecuted (for once) and Eskom's house is put in order, this will simply be throwing good money after bad. The rest of South Africans have to service their debts – no matter how poor they are, or else face criminal prosecution. Eskom needs to step up and take care of their own debt. The current funds from electricity tariffs as well as collecting debts owed by municipalities that are in arrears should cover Eskom's debt over time. No steps have been taken to address the recently exposed corruption. A bail-out will once again be syphoned off by crime cartels. | Marne    | unemployed individual |

Full transparency is required to avoid corruption and blatant theft. Clearly, there have been criminal activities, there is no other way to explain the current situation. If there is this sum of bail-out money, I am convinced a large sum of this will simply flow back into private pockets instead of actually fixing Eskom. Secondly, there is a lack of competence, accountability, and management, else this also would not be the state of affairs. Someone who steals blatantly (and I am referring to various persons in power in this organization as well as in the current government), is committing a crime against every person in South Africa, against every child, every school, and every hospital. In turn, it will lead to absolute misery for an entire nation. I am a 19th-generation South African who moved abroad because I can not survive in my beloved South Africa and feel any secure future. No member of government and family members must have any third party involvement at Eskom (board members and the like) - there are many South African other than those who can fill and make significant contributions to Eskom recovery. They are simply not being invited to participate.3. Eskom is a national asset. It's not an entity to be billed SA of its value...it is in essence supposed to be the cornerstone of all economic activity for SA and the African continent. It's glory can be restored with faithful, honest, committed leaders.4. Greater and more effective employee interventions are necessary. Staff surely cannot be in the best headspace considering these multiple developments.Importantly South Africa's cost of living is gradually being increased by a failing Eskom: food prices, transport prices, production cost have all escalated, leading to greater degrees of poverty across our nation. It's a black hole, and this so-called 'Debt Relief Bill' is not going to make any difference - in three year's time the ANC will just ask again and again. Fact is, that ESKOM is this regime's primary tool in its control of the nation's population through deprivation, joblessness, fear, hunger, and poverty. "Make them spend all their life forces on matters of survival, thus preventing them from critically evaluating and opposing our power" is this ANC's modus operandum that originates from way before 1994. Now that the primary tax base is diminishing through what's called the 'brain drain', this regime will use ESKOM, among other avenues, to feed its obsessive greed.   | Arjan    | unemployedindividual |

By converting a portion of the loan into ordinary shares, the government essentially forgives or converts part of the loan into equity in the company. This means that the government acquires ownership of a portion of the company without having to use additional funds or take on additional debt. The Act also notes that, in addition to the amounts mentioned above, R70 billion of Eskom's debt is a direct charge against the National Revenue Fund through a debt takeover arrangement for the 2025/26 financial year, as determined by the Minister. This totals R254 billion loan from the tax payer!The Minister must also determine conditions for the conversion of a portion of the loan for each financial year, now what are these conditions? The future impact on consumers is not clear, it maybe opportune timing to privatize Eskom . | Adele     | unemployed individual |

A lack of skills, corruption, top ANC officials involved in the "Eskom mafia" etc. and the lack of willpower to change the status quo, will make everything worse. The tenderized mafia will not allow Eskom to return to full operation because that will cut off there revenue channels, so to get Eskom back on track the ANC will have to be removed completely and independent experts will have to take over with outside funds and government must have limited say in the operation (with certain conditions to the operators). This is the only way to get rid of load shedding and the ridiculously high electricity prices.  | Anton   | unemployed individual |
| 2023-04-1507:58:08 | Gauteng       | No I do not | Direct charges for requirements of Eskom | Stop the corruption and appoint skilled people to do the job. Do not just look at BEE that's where the corruption comes in. Prosecute the criminals. Otherwise, NOTHING WILL HELP. Otherwise, privatize as in other countries. Why are we trying to fix an institution that is beyond fixing? And is the money ever going to be used for what it is intended or is this just a nice way for someone to profit at the expense of the taxpayers? They will increase the cost of electricity to pay off these loans so will any actually benefit because soon you will not be able to afford the electricity even if you have access to it. Also, this is just another way they reward corruption and mismanagement leaving the taxpayer and the SA citizen to feel the brunt financially. They should open up options for privatization in the industry and have Eskom step up its game to be able to compete in this sector. Stop the corruption!Stop BEE practices.Appoint skilled workers and oversee their work and keep all accountable. Manage the business effectively, diligently, and ethically, and maintain the power plants!This is not difficult. Eskom is a functioning entity that needs to fix its problems and conduct regular maintenance. If managed properly Eskom would be a highly profitable company. The public cannot continue to fund a failing entity with bloated staff and poor management. The cost of living is increasing at an alarming rate with basic items beyond reach for some, yet we are burdened with continuous price hikes from Eskom to pay for poor service and continuous blackouts The taxpayer can no longer afford the government debt continuously being levied on us. The middle-class citizens who are diligent taxpayers cannot continue to carry the load. We are constantly being drained by the government which is also not making a concerted effort to hold everyone else accountable. It's enough, you are dragging us into debt and poverty. When will Treasury and Government realize that the Eskom ship has sunk and that they need the private sector to take over? That is where the expertise lies. Eskom got rid of all their qualified people and now we suffer the consequences. At the end of the day, the poor middle-class citizen is the one that will bear the brunt of the corruption and total mismanagement. Debt was incurred due to corruption. Eskom continues to employ 1000s of workers at all levels who are NOT skilled for their respective Job Descriptions. It is time to OUTSOURCE the HR Department in its entirety. Why is Eskom still handing out Bursaries and funding Science EXPOS??? Eskom needs to FOCUS on one thing and that is electricity generation - using existing power stations and feeding in wherever possible, new IPP to boost generation. To do that maintenance and replacement of aging plant structure needs to be undertaken. Get only qualified engineers and technicians involved. Get rid of Middle Management. The entire organization is fleshed out with ANC cadres and is a place of Electrical Engineers and technicians. No one else is necessary except for data capturers for the accounts side of things. Billions of ZAR now needed in advance, for the next THREE years implies that no improvements are forecast - just more of the same failure. Eskom should be turning a profit - just like Umgeni Water. Get SOWETO to pay its bill or CUT them off. The same goes for Eden-dale and any other concentration of South African populations, who demands FREE electricity. This is 2023 - there are no freebies - pay, OR buy candles. Money means nothing to our government, no matter how many zeros are in the amount and it just flows away like water off a duck's back! So NO, I do NOT support spoonfeeding Eskom with Rand after Rand after Rand anymore. It's just another bottomless pit! | 2023-04-1316:03:03 | KwaZulu -Natal |  | No I do not | Direct charges for requirements of Eskom | Absolutely not!!! Eskom is in this mess because of unqualified people and MASSIVE corruption. This has lead to load shedding and blackouts having a huge impact on people, businesses and the SA economy overall, resulting in more and more lost jobs as businesses scale down or close down altogether. Sort out the current problems and make people accountable before giving more money, otherwise this will only disappear into a big black hole like all other financial support given to Eskom in the past. Recent government decisions not to show any transparency and to rather hide information from the public about the problems within Eskom, shows that the government has absolutely no commitment or intention to deal with the massive problems within Eskom and to turn it around. Any financial support will be funded by taxpayers. Why should the public be paying for this debacle?!! Any additional government support to Eskom in its current form, with no accountability, will only cause more financial burden and sink Eskom further. Rather privatise Eskom which will be better run, reduce costs and alleviate the burden on taxpayers, and ultimately result in improved service delivery to the public. | GREIG    | unemployed individual |

| 2023-04-1315:37:23 | Western Cape  |  | No I do not | Direct charges for requirements of Eskom | How can the Finance Minister allow this, when at the same time, Eskom is threatening to block Rural Maintenance (Frankfort, Free State) from reducing load shedding. And over the years countless stories of how Eskom and MPs are against IPP. The billions can rather be put towards supporting/financing IPPs with credible records. It makes one wonder how many rotten apples there are in the Ministry of Finance, and even all the way up - are they also eating from the trough? How is our president even allowing this to be considered? Empty promises on fighting corruption. I say it again, the president and all ministers and deputy ministers must get the same load shedding as the rest of the country and they should be blocked from being allowed to get inverters, batteries, solar panels, diesel generators etc, so that they can feel the pain and suffering that they are causing, and start to realise how they are destroying this country. How many SME's have had to close down because they cannot manage all the load shedding. | Andrea    | unemployed individual |

Some areas are exempted from paying Eskom increases and debt is written off even though high income people reside within those areas. If we don't pay our bill our electricity is cut - how is it possible that others don't pay for years but continue being provided with service? Bad management and appointments due to discriminatory appointments have SA in a financial crisis. Every household must pay due fees and proper appointments in posts must be made to ensure survival. Fraud and theft of billions by ANC as well as incompetence must be destroyed to ensure that the few law-abiding citizens paying taxes and electricity, etc can survive.   | Lauretta  | unemployed individual |

Some areas tap electricity from transformers next to the road. First of all these residents should start to pay their bills or their electricity be cut and those tapping electricity from transformers should be arrested and Eskom should be hold accountable for allowing this impropriety. Just like all other SOEs. Corruption has to be eradicated for Eskom to become a trustworthy, transparent company. As Eskom is running on taxpayers' money, it should be accountable to the taxpayers who should be able to access their accounts on request if they wish to. Otherwise, fire every single person that works there as the yeast of corruption has spread everywhere, and employ honest, God-fearing people from every ethnic group, who are not in any way related or in the same social circles or of the same political party. Then perhaps we will start getting services that we the citizens are paying for but not receiving. At present there are clearly few of them if any in ESKOM's employ. Writing off the loss is not worth considering, because come next year, there's going to be another loss and thereafter yet another and so on it goes.ESKOM must now be ruthless. Get rid of those that are not adding value, the corruption etc., start prosecuting cable theft as a serious crime against the state (key point) and don't treat it as petty pilfering, heavy sentences to all involved. Close down all those who have hooked up to the grid illegally and so on. It can be done. ESKOM can become profitable again. Right now small businesses can't compete internationally should their electricity bill make up the bulk of their input costs. The madness continues. Many citizens have pre-paid meters, so we pay in advance and still have load shedding. Ridiculous!! I do not support the debt relief payment of Eskom, since there is a lot of corruption within Eskom. I do not support our taxpayer money going to support yet another thief. The money will just be pilfered as before. So now we are advancing money. The current budget is already stolen and the powers that be don't have to disclose how it was utilized. Now they are going to have access to billions more, and that will just go the same way. How the public sees fit to keep voting the ANC amazes me. By using taxpayers' money for the loan, we as electricity users have to repay the loan on our own (tax) money... So they are basically charging us twice. Why not use taxpayer's money to get off-grid. It's time private energy comes into power and the people have the choice of who to use for their energy requirements. But this won't happen until our law is enforced. Just another vehicle for these thieves to steal. Eskom must be sold and given to private companies who are professionals in the power supply business. The government is not protecting the taxpayers against the theft of their funds by Eskom management and stakeholders through procurement and illegal connections as there is no investigation of financial irregularities at Eskom for the last 20 years or prosecutions for them to view and decide if the entity's stewardship is fit and proper and to ensure that effective safeguards are in place and tested with transparent reporting to the taxpayers. The government being always quick to provide debt relief to Eskom under the existing conditions of failed stewardship is like a thieving organisation asking the government for money which it hands from taxpayers with no strings attached. The government would be an accomplice to the fraud in this instance. The government cannot appoint an organisation to investigate an SOE which is a 'branch of government' or an extension to it. The taxpayers can only appoint an independent organisation as they are impartial and stand to lose from fraudulent practices at Eskom and by government. Besides, did the Black Business Koko and his cadres not make a bold announcement that when de Ruyter leaves Eskom there will no longer be load shedding??? When this happens MAYBE the citizens MIGHT look at debt relief AFTER all outstanding bills and illegal connections have been dealt with in their entirety. No proper plan has been made available for public scrutiny to address all of Eskom's shortcomings in terms of capacity, corruption, bloated salary bills, technical capability, etc. Public statements made to date are vague and unsupported. Eskom should not receive public money without accounting for itself to the public. The ANC Government is, for example, currently actively blocking Parliamentary scrutiny and oversight aimed at exposing and dealing with corruption at Eskom. This is irrational. At this stage, the only solutions offered to deal with the ANC Government's continued corruption, incompetence and maladministration in dealing with Eskom is for the public to foot Eskom debt, either through raising tariffs, providing loans/write-offs with public money or both. The ANC Government should be charged with the heinous crime of driving Eskom into the ground. It is inconceivable that Eskom could be in its current state after more than two decades of loud and clear warnings. Dropping this matter in the public's lap after such incompetence and corruption is utterly irrational and presents no lasting solution. The ANC Government's continued communist ideology to oppose private energy supply, drag their feet to approve such projects, and especially its slow progress towards adding renewable energy to our supply has to a huge extent contributed to a lack of generation capacity. Now this lack of capacity is cited by the same ANC Government as good reason to revert back to more coal powered generation. This is criminal. It smacks of political agendas and corruption. These same folks cannot simply say "Trust us, we will fix it". No more! The public needs to see what the ANC Government and Eskom actually plans to do to resolve matters. The public must scrutinize this plan. The public must accept a plan. The Government must execute this plan. All BEFORE using public money in any way. | Ursula     | business owner |

If they showed us that they are serious about stopping the daily theft of coal and diesel in Eskom for instance, then I would support the funding. Also, they should arrest those responsible for the sabotage in Eskom, and those criminals should be charged under the National Security Act , with treason, and be executed. | 2023-04-1213:48:55 | Gauteng       | No I do not | Other | Dear Finance Minister, I am writing to express my concerns about the proposal to write off Eskom's debt. While I understand the urgency to address Eskom's financial challenges, I believe that writing off debt would only serve to increase corruption and is not a fair solution for the people. Firstly, the idea of debt forgiveness is not a sustainable solution. It would only serve to encourage further reckless spending and irresponsible borrowing by Eskom, as they would no longer have to worry about paying off their debt. This would put additional strain on the country's finances and would not address the root cause of Eskom's financial challenges. Secondly, the idea of debt forgiveness is not fair to the people. The people of South Africa have worked hard to pay their taxes and should not have their hard-earned taxes used to bail out Eskom. This would be akin to rewarding bad behavior and would not be in the best interests of the people. Instead, I propose that Eskom be given the opportunity to restructure its debt and be held accountable for its financial mismanagement. This would be a more sustainable solution and would hold Eskom accountable for its actions. Thank you for your time and consideration. Sincerely,Nico   | Nico       | business owner |

That is a wonderful way of doing bossiness. Will the government do the same for me, give me a loan and allow me to pay less tax so that the loan can be repaid. This is a wonderful way to grow the economy. We have had many questions and debates related Eskom's inability. the problem lies with the interference of the higher powers and corruption with in those ranks. Unless the corruption in Eskom is properly addressed, criminals prosecuted (for once) and Eskom's house is put in order, this will simply be throwing good money after bad. The rest of South Africans have to service their debts – no matter how poor they are, or else face criminal prosecution. Eskom needs to step up and take care of their own debt. The current funds from electricity tariffs as well as collecting debts owed by municipalities that are in arrears should cover Eskom's debt over time. No steps have been taken to address the recently exposed corruption. A bail-out will once again be syphoned off by crime cartels.   | ilonka             | business owner |

Throwing taxpayer money at the problem will only lead to more corruption and stealing at the utility. The utility needs to be placed under administration within the current set of rules with various external advisors which can assist to solve the problem, which one is the fundamental corruption and blatant stealing of resources within Eskom itself. A separate task force needs to be created to root this out and stop the bleeding first. Eskom's debt is more than 1,3 trillion rand, so how will the taxpayer keep on footing that bill if the problems are not arrested first? | Willem  | businessowner |

In the absence of political interference Eskom can bounce back, employing simple business principles. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. No member of government should trade with Eskom - this is how prove manipulation is grossly abused.</li> <li>2. No member of government and family members must have any third party involvement at Eskom (board members and the like) - there are many South African other than those who can fill and make significant contributions to Eskom recovery. They are simply not being invited to participate.</li> <li>3. Eskom is a national asset. It's not an entity to billed SA of its value...it is in essence supposed to be the cornerstone of all economic activity for SA and the African continent. It's glory can be restored with faithful, honest, committed leaders.</li> <li>4. Greater and more effective employee interventions are necessary. Staff surely cannot be in the best headspace considering these multiple developments.</li> </ol> Importantly South Africa's cost of living is gradually being increased by a failing Eskom: food prices, transport prices, production cost have all escalated, leading to greater degrees of poverty across our nation. This inevitably leads to crime as a means of survival. It can no longer be tolerated in the simplest terms. It must be rejected in the most harshest terms. Unemployment increases can only spell doom for millions of South Africans who aspire to live peacefully and safely in their homes and country. We must resist any additional loans which lead to increases in living costs for all South Africans | William  | businessowner |

| 2023-04-14 14:39:51 | Western Cape   |  | No I do not | Delegations and authorisations | To whom it may concernI am writing to express my opposition to the 2023 Eskom Debt Relief Bill, which proposes a significant allocation of funds from the National Revenue Fund to provide debt relief for Eskom Holding SOC Ltd.While I acknowledge the importance of addressing Eskom's financial challenges and ensuring a stable electricity supply for the country, I am concerned about the potential misuse of these funds due to the history of corruption and mismanagement within both the government and Eskom. Allocating such large sums of taxpayer money without first implementing comprehensive measures to address and prevent corruption might not result in the desired outcome and could exacerbate the existing financial challenges.Before approving the bill, I urge the Standing Committee on Appropriation to consider the following recommendations:Establish stringent oversight and monitoring mechanisms to ensure that the allocated funds are used appropriately and effectively. This could include independent audits and regular reporting on the use of funds and progress in addressing Eskom's financial challenges.Implement comprehensive reforms within Eskom to address issues of mismanagement and corruption, including a thorough review of procurement practices, contracts, and internal controls.Ensure transparency and accountability in the allocation and disbursement of funds, as well as in the reporting of progress and outcomes related to the debt relief measures.Explore alternative solutions to address Eskom's financial challenges, such as encouraging private sector investment, restructuring the organization, or promoting the adoption of renewable energy sources to reduce the company's reliance on costly and environmentally damaging fossil fuels.In conclusion, while I understand the urgent need to address Eskom's financial difficulties, I believe that it is crucial to prioritize transparency, accountability, and the prevention of corruption before allocating such significant funds from the National Revenue Fund. I urge the Standing Committee on Appropriation to carefully consider these concerns and recommendations when deliberating on the 2023 Eskom Debt Relief Bill.Sincerely,Jean Craven0825722738jean@contessa.biz | JEAN     | business owner |

And this has happened to Eskom and a few other parastatal enterprises. By taking accountability away from the leadership of Eskom by giving them relief from reporting and then acting upon these wasteful and wanton expenses, the Minister and the cabinet fails the nation: We demand that those that had been rewarded unduly for their services - even without providing the promised and paid for services - to be brought to book. | 2023-04-2017:50:17 | Gauteng           |  | No I do not | Direct chargesforrequirementsof Eskom | Government recklessly funded ESKOM's consumption expenditure lending the SOE taxpayer's money. Effectively, prohibiting ESKOM to make capital investments to sustain electricity supply for South Africans.To exacerbate this reckless behaviour government allowed defunct municipalities' debtors to remain outstanding with no consequence to the municipalities under government control. Government supported ESKOM to be grossly overstaffed, with staff poorly qualified and experienced for their jobs. Government failed in curbing wasteful expenditure, now even trying to exempt ESKOM from reporting on it. Government failed in its governance of ESKOM in curbing supply chain corruption and theft. In fact, it appears that government may even have benefitted from this corruption over more than a decade. It recklessly stood by knowing that the interest bill is spiraling out of control making it utterly impossible for ESKOM to invest in capital equipment to sustain the supply of electricity to South Africa.Government is guilty of failing in its corporate governance role mismanaging taxpayer's across several SOEs, central, regional and local government (municipality) structures.It is unethical and immoral, in the light of government's squandering of taxpayers money to write off ESKOM loans. Particularly since ESKOM and Government do not have a decisive, practical action plan to solve South Africa's energy crisis. Loans will just keep on mounting up due to consumption expenditure waste and interest.ESKOM should not be receiving any debt relief while the situation above prevails. | Johann    | businessowner |

Eskom has like scores of other SOEs proven that they lack even elementary understanding of how money systems work. If that is read as an insult the alternative is captured in Andre de Ruyter's explosive revelations about calculated criminal intent. What renders Eskom's implosion inevitable is also some sticky fingers on cabinet level. The rot has been defined. Because of what is stated above, it seems unlikely that the political machinery responsible and accountable for Eskom's demise will have the courage and conviction to give this back to the kind of people that designed, built and ran a world best State energy provider. This brave and noble step is the only solution because the people who created the mess are not remotely equipped, willing or able to match the requirements of rebuilding a world class energy business. | Casper  | business owner |

By bailing them out by tax write-offs their mismanagement is encouraged and prolonged. Eskom which previously was one of the top power suppliers in the world is currently in such disarray that this is the one entity which will finally bring the country to its knees, destroying the economy. We, the citizens of South Africa, small business owners and taxpayers are the people suffering because of Eskom's total incompetence and corruption. The worst of all is that because of the financial benefits to its management and workers no reforms will be instituted. The situation as it is will continue until the whole system finally collapses. It took South Africa 30 years to go from a prosperous and stable Eskom to total shambles. | Julanda      | businessowner |

It has become an Alladdins cave of Thieves and Criminals - with ALL Top Management and every Employee seated at the feeding trough of Criminal Banqueting! NOT ONE of the Criminals linked to the Anc ( including those in the Top 6) have been apprehended and charged! The stench of this corruption far outweighs the so called "green atmosphere requirements" as requested by the International Bankers and their cabal. ESKOM should be shut down, and the entire board and mid to Senior Management should be jailed and the keys thrown away! Down with Eskom Down Down Down!!   | Peter          | business owner |

I believe they need to be held accountable for their actions. They have caused so much damage to businesses and overall quality of life in South South Africa. Bailing them out only encourages them on their current path of destruction and condones their behaviour. Where is the relief for businesses that have suffered due to Eskom? It's called a "bailout" but its inevitable that the deficit will be pushed on to the tax payer down the line, which will be unforgivable considering the economic devastation Eskom has already caused for people. And once it is in motion, it will be nearly impossible to reverse. It is insane in the first place to even consider using tax payers money to "rectify" this situation considering the damage to the nation and the people of South Africa at the hand of Eskom | D         | business owner |

It appears that the debt is due to mismanagement and possibly corruption. First an independent forensic audit needs to be done. If any corruption is discovered, appropriate actions need to be taken to bring perpetrators to account and to ensure that there is no corruption in the future. It is important that the government does such an audit/investigation as the citizens need to know for certain that Eskom is functioning properly before government funds are used for its operations.A further concern is how Eskom will repay the debt without burdening the consumer? The concern is that Eskom will increase its rates and the consumers end up paying the debt, which is unjust seeing that Eskom is responsible for its own failures.Furthermore where is the government getting the money from to provide the debt relief? The concern is that tax payers will be carrying the burden. Or will the government borrow money from the Reserve Bank or international banks, which means again a burden on the tax payer and conditions being placed on the country by the loaners.And the major concern is that the citizens are in effect carrying the burden when the actual problems of Eskom have not been addressed and fixed. Seeing that the problems at Eskom have not been addressed (and there is no sign of it being so), the citizens of South Africa keep pouring money into a deep hole of mismanagement and corruption.It is now time for the government to initiate the processes rid Eskom of the corrupt elements. | Volker   | Non-profit    |

In fact they have defied every accepted Business Plan principle! They are a joke and if they believe that foreign investors will be fooled by shifting some of Eskom debt Treasury to make their financials appear more attractive, they are even more stupid than I originally thought. They don't remotely deserve a bailout at the taxpayers expense. In fact as an SOE they make SAA look like Mickey Mouse in comparison. In my opinion they really should be given only 2 options:OPTION 1: If you want to remain an SOE then do radical restructuring to get rid of all your incompetent and unproductive staff. That should equate to probably 80% of your management with the balance making up a total of 50% of your current staff complement. Source proven skilled employees locally or internationally and reduce your over inflated salaries while not entertaining any ridiculous Union demands for added benefits such as 80% medical subsidisation, additional housing and education benefits for children etc. Also, please remember that no employee is entitled to a Performance Bonus if an SOE is reliant on a Taxpayer bailout due to overall performance outcomes i.e. financially negative.OPTION 2: Privatised! The best option in my opinion. It's worked internationally and while it will take a few years to rectify the failures of the past few decades, it is the long term solution to secure a reliable electric infrastructure that will attract foreign investment. | John     |         |

| 2023-04-1711:22:21 | Gauteng           |  | No I do not | Other | I think the total debt owed to Eskom by consumers is less than the debt relief . So this means that Eskom will not be able to function profitably. It is selling too little electricity to pay for the running of the entity. Also I cannot think that a government is so stupid that they continue with their corruption, BEE, AA etc as not to see the damage they are causing. So my conclusion is that they are doing this deliberately and for what conspiracy theory/reason I do not know . Therefore I resist the debt relief because as a taxpayer I will end up paying.  | pieter        |  |
| 2023-04-1710:22:56 | WesternCape   |  | No I do not | Other | Several solutions are available, but won't be accepted cause then there is no more monopoly. We have operational hydro-plants and small wind farms ... why will Eskom not allow them to come into play and ASSIST the country / regions?? if they are allowed to assist, the load will be less, allowing them to fix their goodies without us having to repetitively pay for nothing. And they do have the money for this. Any private business without money closes it's doors, yet they are allowed to not only NOT privatize, but continue getting money from wherever? Any company with outstanding monies owed to them will get it back, yet they continue to write of masses of monies that someone else must subsidize going forward? Make that make sense ...   | Yolanda       |  |
| 2023-04-1708:48:07 | KwaZulu-Natal |  | No I do not | Other | This is getting out of hand. If a company has been run to the ground they become insolvent and should then face the consequences to liquidate the company. The directors can also be held accountable personally for their actions. Why is this different with a state owned enterprise? Why must we as hard working South Africans pay for this? We are the customers and should not be expected to bail them out of our tax money. If you think logically about this - we are going to pay twice. Once out of our tax money and secondly out of the the huge tariffs they are going to raise to pay this back. This is a so-called double jeopardy. It could be argued that this Bill is unconstitutional because it is against the public interest, because Eskom and their directors must be held accountable for this. South Africans can not afford to pay a cent more for their incompetence and non-service delivery. | Christelle    |  |

| 2023-04-1901:05:55 | Gauteng        | South Africa | Not fully | Other | Dear Sirs, The biggest mistake was made some 12 years ago when it was decided, in my opinion rather naively, that Eskom should be directly funded by revenue received from the sale of electricity rather than from the Bond Market. The 'sine qua non' of the bond market, also known as the capital market, is the funding of very large capital intensive projects such as airports, bridges, harbours, highways, and huge electrical power stations. Eskom needs financial assistance but it should be via the bond market. A 3 year moratorium on Eskom using the bond market is a gigantic mistake. It shows a misunderstanding of the bond market. My suggestion is that funding should be switched back to the bond market with Eskom offering treasury backed "Put Options" on the long dated stock issued. Let Eskom receive the full premium on the put options issued which options are guaranteed by treasury at no cost to Eskom. The premium from the put options would be a very substantial source of free income for Eskom and the existence of the put options would protect the treasury from excessive funding requirements. Eskom's present funding model is wrong. In my opinion, with the current funding model for Eskom, electricity rates will rise rapidly and the rand will devalue rapidly as has been happening. Kind Regards, Andrew Penwill | Andrew    | retired |

So whether there is debt relief for the actual state owned entity, the debt is still sovereign debt. To me this a bookkeeping "smoke & mirrors" thing where debt is allocated a different bookkeeping name and is entered on a different page/line in the books of the entity than to the "normal" debt page. I dont see any other means of lessening the overwhelming debt burden eskom faces, which can be apportioned to both national treasury and eskom; corruption and non-payment by customers, etc., etc.   | Bruce            | retired |

Will (1) taxes or tariffs be raised or (2) will the loan(s) be extended from existing tax and tariff revenues, i.e. reallocating the National Budget within existing income streams?If it is (1) above, I strongly object. The tax payer is already overstretched and the current portion/ proportion of disposable income that South Africans need to allocate to electricity tariffs is already very high. The financial sustainability of especially the middle-class is on shaky legs and close to collapse. The South African middle-class would arguably carry the brunt of any tax or tariff increases. When the companies finances are made public and proof is available that the money will not be irregularly spent then this might be a good idea. However, I also don't believe that South Africa as a country has the funds to be able to afford to give these loans to Eskom. Even if the money itself exists, the nice is likely to heavily devalue the Rand and this will lead to the funds being inadequate and the country ending up in a far worse condition. The correct remedy will be to cleanse the company of all corruption and enforce existing laws against infrastructure theft and illegal connections. It must also use a capable qualified work force and also make use of vetted capable contractors or vendors that can deliver work or projects at a reasonable price - no favouritism due to political brownie points. This way the company will have enough to finance its own projects and not need such huge price hikes for their unreliable product. Otherwise RSA loses 3 years in the clean energy race. Eskom may not use proceeds from the sale of non-core assets for capital and operating needs. Agreed. Any sale of non-core assets to be used for further debt reduction. This should be specified in the T's &amp; C's. Eskom will not raise any new borrowings from 1 April 2023 until the end of the debt-relief period, unless permitted by the Minister of Finance. Absolutely no further borrowing!!! You can't get out of a hole while digging out the bottom. Eskom's guarantee framework agreement of R350 billion will reduce in line with National Treasury recommendations. Agreed. Positive equity balances in Eskom's derivative contracts cannot be used to structure new debt or loan agreements without the National Treasury's approval. Again, no new debt. Full stop. The debt relief can only be used to settle debt and interest payments. Agreed. Monies should not be paid to Eskom, but rather directly to the people that they owe. I don't trust Eskom not to steal the money if it comes under their control - however briefly. Eskom may not implement remuneration adjustments that negatively affect its overall financial position and sustainability. Agreed, remuneration should be amended against inflation and no more for the duration of the period. | Stuart  | employedindividual |

| 2023-04-2410:39:07 | Mpumalanga    | Not fully | Other | I feel Eskom receives money from the public for the electricity used and that money should go to pay off their debt. As with any normal company you have to budget. You cannot just expect the taxpayer to keep on bailing you out. We have hospitals and schools that need help, and I don't see the government putting that much money into them, all we do there is keep dropping the standard. My personal feeling is we need to stop corruption so that the money collected from the taxpayer can actually be used for the things that it is intended to. If government cannot keep Eskom running, they should sell it or get some private companies to feed into the grid. Let the country have independent suppliers and let the people decide who they want to use. I think in that way Eskom will have no alternative but to pull up their socks and run the company properly. Can you emagin if all private companies started say to the government look, I have debt and we can't carry on give us a bail-out then we do that every year. No one is going to take responsibility then because it is just easier to get a bail out and allow the increase the whole time. Government says they are helping the poor / disadvantage, but I don't see that increasing the cost of living and leaving people without power is helping. With the power problem more people are losing their jobs, small businesses are closing down, as they cannot afford to put in solar or any of the other systems out there. So, in the end you have just got more people depending on grants and less people paying to tax which will leave government and the people with nothing. | Maria     | employed individual |
| 2023-04-2122:37:45 | Gauteng       | Not fully | Other | It is concerning but are setting up a very expensive precedent on the management of debt in failing State-owned Enterprises (SOEs). Years of ANC sponsored corruption and mismanagement of Eskom, the South African taxpayer is now being asked to reward Eskom for its failures through a debt subsidy. The bailout by the State of this size will pose a severe risk to South Africa's already fragile sovereign debt profile. Shifting Eskom's debt onto the State's balance sheet would precipitate a marked deterioration in the nation's already stretched finances. It is wholly naive to think for a moment that another bailout is an appropriate solution to address the structural problems that beset the utility. Treasury absorbing up to half of Eskom's debt will not only set a dangerous precedent for other failing SOEs, but will risk flinging South Africa back to junk status as soon as the announcement is made to do so.  | Jaco      | employed individual |

| 2023-04-2115:19:07 | WesternCape   |  | Not fully | Direct charges for requirements of Eskom | There are several potential drawbacks or cons of the Eskom Debt Relief Bill, as proposed. Some of these include:Cost to taxpayers: Converting Eskom's debt into equity could result in a significant loss for bondholders and investors. Ultimately, this cost may be passed on to taxpayers, who may be required to fund Eskom's debt relief.Precedent for other state-owned companies: If the Eskom Debt Relief Bill is passed, it may set a precedent for other state-owned companies to seek similar relief. This could put further strain on the government's finances and lead to additional bailouts.Reduced incentives for financial prudence: If the government bails out Eskom, it could send a message to other state-owned companies that they can take on excessive debt without facing consequences. This could lead to a culture of financial irresponsibility among these companies.Potential negative impact on credit rating: If the Eskom Debt Relief Bill is passed, it could have a negative impact on South Africa's credit rating. This could increase the cost of borrowing for the government and make it more difficult for other companies in South Africa to raise capital.  | Noori     | employed individual |

Bailing out government institutions allows them to be able to trade recklessly, as they clearly have, and then have the tax payer fit the bill. It allows them to act with no responsibility or accountability because they know their actions are paid for by someone else. The corruption at Eskom has done more damage to this country than anything else have, and it is about to get a lot worse going into winter, with hundreds of thousands of jobs that will worsen levels of load shedding that will probably lead to civil unrest and even more damage to SA.  | Emil      | employed individual |

Why must the South African Public once again foot the bill for ANC corruption. Why is so little effort put into recovering debt from defaulting municipalities such as Soweto, Makhana etc...Eskom currently has a vastly overpaid management that is top heavy with cadres and other useless individuals who do nothing but eat up salary monies. Not only are we paying massively inflated prices for Electricity (Nersa approves huge increases where most companies have to trim their margins and tax payers are unable to keep up with inflation), but we are now also footing the bill to save the (ANC engineered disaster of the) purposefully failing SOE, all while NOT receiving the electricity we require to make the funds to pay for it... and certain "ministers and leaders" at the helm are neither affected nor held accountable for their clearly nefarious decisions.Over and above this, there are still specific (non-critical) residential areas that are not being loadshed, while other areas are getting sabotaged and having to endure extended loadshedding - again, the only reason for this can be that the ANC (and friends) are trying to coerce otherwise opposed and honest citizens to agree to the privatisation of eskom.Lastly, once all is said and done, the Other factors in the country are completely contrary to assisting with investment or any sort of long-term assurances that things are being done for GOOD reasons... The state of disaster will also enable the exemption of critical infrastructure such as water treatment plants and hospitals from loadshedding and to accelerate energy projects while limiting regulatory requirements. The national power utility Eskom will remain within the Ministry of Public Enterprises and will not be shifted to the Ministry of Mineral Resources and Energy; the company will still be restructured (separation of transmission activities from Eskom's power generation and distribution activities) and the National Transmission Company South Africa (NTCSA) should soon be operational with an independent board. In addition, a Minister of Electricity will be appointed by the Presidency to assume full responsibility for overseeing all aspects of the electricity crisis response. Eskom implemented power cuts on more than 200 days in 2022, with record cuts of 6 to 8 hours a day for most households. The company is currently implementing stage-3 and stage-4 loadshedding measures (3-4 GW of capacity unavailable). https://www.enerdata.net/publications/daily-energy-news/south-africa-declares-national-state-disaster-amidst-electricity-crisis.html The above shows positive action. That being the result of political meddling in Eskom affairs since 1994.</li> <li>2) Lack of the shareholder (state) providing investment capital to raise sellable production capacity.</li> <li>3) Any Good business will just love to know there is much more demand than its capacity to sell, then raise capital and be more profitable. Eskom has known a projected shortage forecasted by the early 90's already - other businesses on that basis leveraged that known opportunity to build a market (e.g. Power Factor Correction equipment). Being without investment, Eskom could not leverage the opportunity that exist. As well as having no profitability goal, insufficient expansion goals resulted.</li> <li>4) The principle of using Operational Budget, (Income Statement or "Proffit and Lost") for creating capital (except for a small percentage) is flawed. Capital expansion and replacement of end of life Assets are to come from Capital Budget (investment, or loans). Loans only make sense taking a view on potential profit.</li> <li>5) If the shareholder (state) does not want to invest, plus since Eskom is incapacitated to generate private capital, it left with the only option to raise Debt which is a Liability on the Balance Sheet. But instead of the state/public reaping profit on investment, the public has to face the interests costs on the loan.</li> <li>6) The public has become huge battery owners to store Eskom (and other sources of) capacity. If the costs and sustainability of those batteries are calculated, as well as inefficiency of charging system in the vicinity of 15%, there is a substantial loss of much needed Giga Watt Hours wasted and mega huge Rand value. If Eskom had just been breaking even in capacity, a huge amount of wastage would not occur (both Rand and GWH losses), and only turning that Rand losses into Eskom investment alone, could make a substantial improvement.</li> </ol> Debt - Liquidation trade-off:-----Debt is debt and what remains is for Eskom to be liquidated, if the debt is not repaid. Actional Responses-----1) Severely tap the state over the fingers for following a flawed investment model for Eskom. They should ask money from the public only to properly invest and not for covering debts resulting from lack of investment. If and only if Eskom can be profitable and only if no other related parties skim "potential profit" off in the form of corruption becoming, thereby becoming a loss. It seems the public is here asked to fund corruption schemes rather and we should say NO. Eskom becoming profitable, is the only potential condition for a CONDITIONAL YES, for the state should stand in for the debt. 2) Alternative: List Eskom on the stock exchange to raise capital, for profitability objectives. Stock exchanges are still public money but legally subject to much higher levels of scrutiny. Why would the state be worried about the idea, as it too can be a shareholder on the stock exchange, gain from profit and reduce taxes as a result?If it is the only way to privatize Eskom, then let it be liquidated by providing NO as an answer to the state footing the debt. 3) Eskom is the only party that could legally manipulate short supplying the market, in spite of demand forecasts; and then asks the public to pay manipulated higher market price because of undersupply. It should be illegal, and the public should not foot illicit and manipulated market prices, or debts that arise in doing so.To that the answer is NO. |         |                |

| 2023-04-2011:19:12 | WesternCape   |  | Not fully | Other | In principle, I have no problem in trying to turn Eskom financially around and in ensuring that as a critical and strategic national asset, it once again plays a significant and game changing role in our economic growth and development. Without power we cannot grow. Eskom is unable to do that now and is causing untold damage to the economy that we will feel for more decades to come. It is incumbent on us as South Africans and patriots to seek to achieve the above. HOWEVER, I do not believe that as currently constructed, this legislation will achieve that. The ANC Government does not show any real intention with this legislation, of fixing the problems with Eskom in a long-term fashion. Instead it is clear that the intention is to continue to provide a "pig's" trough instead for senior politicians and executives to feed at and get rich quickly; alternatively, it will not stop this from happening. It is more of the same. If you do not change the management nor address the criminal elements in the institution, and do not immediately seek the accountability of previous parties who are directly responsible for this mess in the past (viz., people like the former Ministers under Zuma, Brian Molefe, any other relevant CEO from then, Board Members, the CFO, and the Guptas), and they are viewed as having gotten away with it - you cannot expect to stop current criminal activity of the lower ranks of staff. The lesson learnt by lower ranked staff at Eskom, is that the big bosses are protected, so why should they not also feed in their own way and cause sabotage. Address the liability of these top miscreants and put them in orange jump suits, and you will address the rest. Someone needs to pay for what happened at Eskom. So far no-one is. So pouring more money now into the institution when the above weaknesses remain, will merely continue this illegal hemorrhaging of funds. Fix the problem of mismanagement and the criminal elements it has given rise to, including the parties identified by Andre de Ruyter, and then only - should the Government put this money into the entity with clear rules and checks and balances. It goes without saying that I therefore do not believe that the current Minister's flawed decision to exempt Eskom from reporting on irregularities in finance, passes any kind of clean smell test. It is rotten to the core. What would Madiba say? He would certainly turn in his grave. It was under him that we adopted the Public Finance Management Act. And institutions then were very well run - up to a fashion that is, because unfortunately we also had the arms deal then - so even then, some of the people including Mr Molefe above, were probably already surreptitiously syphoning funds from that time on. The corrupt remain in office and have yet to be brought to justice. These thieves must first be exposed and removed from their office before the citizens and tax payers of this nation can be assured that further relief will be spent prudently; rather than further lining the already bursting pockets of the corrupt and their equally criminally oriented cronies within the ANC. The question National Treasury must answer for the citizens of South Africa is this, "When will you stop throwing our precious resources and hard earned taxes into the ANC's black hole of systemic corruption?"   | Chantal  | self-employe d |

People not paying their bills and government municipalities not paying over what they should to Eskom. There are no checks and balances. Every municipality that has not been paying its bills should have a change in personnel to personnel with a track record of operating with integrity. Systems need to be implemented to make sure that money that comes in for electricity gets paid to Eskom. Thirdly the persons that do not pay their bills must be cut off. Call in the military if need be in dangerous areas. Then announce to the areas that have been promised free electricity and water that you cannot deliver on that promise. Wealth creation is essential to essential services such as housing, education, health care. There is a domino effect, and while stable and sufficient electricity is not the only critical factor, it is an essential critical factor. This makes the enabling of Eskom to invest in both the maintenance of the existing fleet and the bringing on board new electricity generation facilities absolutely critical to the wellbeing of our country, as a whole, and its citizens, particularly those who are most poor, and least well served in terms of housing, education, health care, jobs, etc. However, I do not know whether these are the right amounts, i.e. too little or too much, possibly. That determination can only be made by understanding the detail of the Eskom's turnaround strategy, and the anticipated cost of the implementation of that strategy, of course in conjunction with a profound understanding of Eskom's budget for those three years, and the extent that budget, plus this cash injection, will enable the implementation of that strategy. And, that is the worrying part. The Finance Minister pats himself on the back for the allocation of funds, but gives us no indication of how that funding will enable the turnaround strategy. In that way, the funding is waved almost as though it were a magic wand. Sadly, we know that there is no such thing as magic wands. At the same time, we have a new Minister of Electricity, who is visiting power stations, ostensibly to formulate a strategy, because that is really all he talks about. So, what precisely then is being funded, if a clear turnaround strategy has not yet been formulated? My opinion, and it is just my opinion, and an uninformed one at that, is that the funding proposed is therefore nothing more than a debt relief intervention. Its intention is to take pressure of Eskom, and might or might not enable it to implement a turnaround strategy, which clearly has not yet formulated. With luck, it will be just the shot in the arm Eskom requires to turn itself around. But, given the absence of the connection of the funding to the strategy, it could just be a case of our Finance Ministry throwing good money after bad, into a bottomless pit of corruption and incompetence. So, yes. I support the funding of Eskom, but I do not have a comfortable feeling that it is linked to the execution of a clear turnaround strategy, and merely enables a Finance Minister to pat himself on the back, and a President to pretend that he has actually done something. | Sean           | employedindividual |

If there is a "State-owned entity" then it is just that State owned, so it's really just a case of in which balance sheet the debt is recorded. State owned entities are supposed to benefit the population by being able to make a profit to be re-invested in improving services, reducing costs to customers, &amp; providing services to those who cannot afford services. This last item - those who cannot afford are supposed to be better taken care of by a State owned entity than a capitalist profit making entity. However, in SA these State owned entities have only cost the population. So this is all tomfoolery on where the debt resides. It resides with the State. | 2023-04-1709:41:51 | Eastern Cape  |  | Yes I do | Direct charges for requirements of Eskom | My initial reaction when hearing of this was to say NO. However, having researched a little it is apparent that without this bail-out from Government we have little hope of Eskom achieving required maintenance and as a result loadshedding and the negative impact on businesses and the economy will only get worse. I understand that Treasury have imposed strict criteria that will be applied for Eskom to be granted the envisaged debt relief and if this is strictly monitored and applied then we will hopefully see Eskom root out corruption and improve maintenance and generation of electricity to the country. In view of the above I support the bill.  | Carol               | employed individual |

| 2023-04-1409:01:22 | Western Cape  |  | Yes I do | Direct charges for requirements of Eskom | I support this bill with conditions. If Eskom management is restructured, and clear goals are set as to how they will tackle the corruption. As a provision, I think that people should pay Eskom directly in regions where municipalities do not have clear audits. In turn, Eskom can reimburse these municipalities. It is key that revenue is collected directly from the consumer and Eskom then allocated part of that revenue back to municipalities. This way it is impossible for Eskom to go into debt. People who do not pay do not get service until they do.The majority of Municipalities cannot be trusted with these monies, they are being paid by consumers and not paying Eskom. There should be no middleman. Only municipalities with a clean audit and good record of paying their Eskom bill should be allowed to collect from the consumer. | Mark                | employed individual |

If we don't look the reality in the face - we will be paying more either way, and worse, we force Eskom to keep tariffs low then we may end up with a failed utility.The only thing worse than a corrupt and failing utility is a completely failed one, and if it can't raise funds, bankruptcy is a real possibility. That'll be an expensive problem to solve.   | Christopher     | business owner |

Our country and its people livelihood depends on electricity. This energy crisis takes away jobs as many companies are closing down. So the sooner Eskom relief is granted the better for every citizen; businesses and investor interest.   | Pinky Matsidiso | business owner |

Eskom does need a total revamp and that includes an exemption of BEE rules and regulations. That will eliminate the opportunists who want to eat at the trough. We need to remove the trough as a matter of urgency and then focus of routing out the corrupt cabals that are currently getting rich to the detriment of our beautiful country.  | Alan            | retired        |

A capacity shortage and a maintenance backlog leading to constant Brake down of coal units due to ANC incapacitating ESKOM and by ANC resource extraction (corruption and state capture). 2. Because of the non-payment of municipalities ESKOM is in huge DEBT.These, usually ANC misgoverned, municipalities will not be able to make the required payments any time soon. Thus, the only sound way is for the National Treasury to Loan Eskom these billions in order to stay afloat.In the meantime, the ANC National Leadership shall dispatch administrators to take over the treasury of ESKOM defaulting municipalities to find the funds (incl. in ANC mayors and councillors bank accounts) to pay ESKOM.                                   | Richner         | retired        |

This escalating debt is a result of many of bad governance:- Non payment by residents, either due to bad services, poor income ability, dishonest staff, state capture.- Non adjustment to growing demand.All these matters are water under the bridge. To punish Eskom now by NOT allowing debt relief, is NOT going to solve the original causes of this mess. The debt will anyway be paid by the taxpayer - whether the bill is allowed & state funds are used to pay the debt, or tariffs are increased to cover the debts.I say, pay the debts, use the state funds for that, rather than allow that as well to be robbed at another place. Rather use it now to improve Eskom's debt situation. | Frikkie         | retired        |
