SHORT BACKGROUND:

I was born in Soweto we then moved to a town in Limpopo called Polokwane: better known as Africa's Eden. My upbringing in Soweto was humble. It has taught me the values and principles of life. What I have learned the most by living in Soweto is to have self-motivation and that hard- work and determination pays off. Also learning that "impossible" is just a word that is controlled by ones limitations. So that has helped me to change my pessimistic mindset into optimistic and believing more in myself and what the future holds for me and less on my then present environment.

I have learned that goals come with responsibility and no matter how hard the circumstances may be sometimes, you always stick to them until you achieve what you want (not giving up). I am an enthusiastic, hard-working woman and I can adjust well to any given environment.

I believe in putting out my best in any given environment; because when one does such, they start to enjoy the job and in return people around you enjoy working with you.

I am a very innovative women and I aspire to achieve quite a lot of goals and have started achieving some.

I believe that discipline is the bridge between goals and accomplishment.

END!
